10 CENTS DAILY, 20 CENTS SATURDAY

B.C. Cement Firm Monopoly Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eight companies have been accused of illegally decreasing and preventing competition in the sale and supply of cement and ready-mix concrete in British Columbia.

The charges, laid under the federal Combines Investigation Act, cover a 14-year period between Jan. 1, 1958, and Dec. 31, 1971. They were sworn out by Staff Sergeant Gerald Young of the RCMP and were due for return in provincial court here today.

Accused on two counts under the act are Ocean Construction Supplies Ltd., La-large Canada Ltd., Canada Cement Lafarge Ltd., Deeks-Lafarge Ltd., Lafarge Concrete Ltd., Metro Concrete Ltd., and British Columbia Cement Co. Ltd.

Also named in the charges involving the seven companies, but not charged, are Inland Cement Industries Ltd. and the Construction-Labor Relations Association and the members thereof, unduly to prevent or lessen competition in the production, manufacture, purchase, sale, transportation or supply in the province of British Columbia of an article or commodity which may be the subject of trade or commerce, to wit cement, and

The charges against the seven firms facing two charges state: "... Did unlawfully conspire, combine, agree or arrange together and with one another and with Inland Cement Industries Limited and the Construction Labor Relations Association and the members thereof, unduly to prevent or lessen competition in the production, manufacture, purchase, sale, transportation or supply in the province of British Columbia of an article or commodity which may be the subject of trade or commerce, to wit cement, and did thereby commit an indictable offence contrary to the provisions of the Combines Investigation Act."

The second charge duplicates the wording above except that where cement is the commodity named in the first charge, ready-mixed concrete is the commodity listed in the second.

The charge against Ocean Construction and Butler Brothers, involves dates between Jan. 1, 1960, and Dec. 31, 1971, and reads:

"... Did unlawfully conspire, combine, agree or arrange together and with one another and with Columbia Ready-Mix Ltd., and with Trio Ready-Mix Ltd., and Trio Ready-Mix (1971) Ltd. unduly to prevent or lessen competition in the production, manufacture, purchase, sale, transportation or supply on Vancouver Island in the province of B.C. of an article or commodity which may be the subject of trade or commerce, to wit ready-mix concrete, and did thereby commit an indictable offence contrary to the provisions of the Combines Investigation Act."

RED FACES OVER FLAG

LONDON (AP) — Red-faced officials of the British Aircraft Corp. are trying to find out who was to blame for their supersonic Concorde flying into a Portuguese colony displaying the flag of an anti-Portuguese guerrilla movement.

A spokesman for BAC, which is building the 1,600-mile-an-hour jet with Aerospatiale of France, said: "The crew honestly thought they were flying the flag of Angola, the Portuguese province in West Africa."

Salmon Rivers Get Funds From Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said the government is allocating extra money this year for the clearing of salmon spawning streams in B.C.

He made the statement in the House in answer to a question from Tom Barnett (NDP — Comox-Alberni) who asked when Ottawa will set aside money and assign staff to catch up with the "long-standing backlog" of neglected salmon spawning streams in the province.

Mop-Up Crews Converge On Alert Bay Spill Site

An emergency meeting of all levels of government was held at Alert Bay this afternoon while ships were being rushed to the scene of the biggest oil spill on the British Columbia coast.

As the meeting was under way James Caird, master of the freighter Irish Stardust which has speeded an estimated 100,000 gallons of crude bunker oil since she hit rocks in Johnstone Strait early Thursday, was due to appear in Victoria provincial court.

The charge is failing to report by radio to a pollution officer the discharge of oil or an oily mixture in Canadian waters.

A industry of transport official in Vancouver said the 20,000-ton freighter hit rocks in the area of Harrington Island across from Alert Bay just after midnight.

"The incident wasn't reported to us until 8:45 a.m.," he said.

Alert Bay, a village on Cormorant Island, facing northern Vancouver Island, will be the centre for the massive mop-up needed but oil has been scattered all along the route the Irish Stardust took on her way to Victoria.

She arrived here Thursday evening. Today she was in the Esquimalt Graving Dock, waiting for repairs, the whole of her port side girdled with an oil boom.

A diver interviewed after he had gone down to examine her No. 4 hold where most of the leakage is expected to have started, said she could be punctured in several places.

A preliminary closed hearing, ordered by the ministry of transport, began as soon as the Irish Stardust arrived here Thursday evening.

Bombs Against Volcano?

Gunman Killed In Hijack Bid

CALVI, Corsica (Reuters)

A heavily-armed man was shot to death today after seizing five hostages in an abortive hijack attempt at Calvi airport.

The gunman, said to have been a French Foreign Legionnaire, burst into the airport lounge armed with a sub-machine-gun, an automatic pistol and a sack filled with fragmentation grenades and cartridges, police said.

He then grabbed five persons in the lounge and held them at gunpoint. He said he intended to hijack a plane of the international French airline France Inter, which was due to land in Calvi in the afternoon.

If he failed, he said, he would commit suicide, eyewitnesses said.

One of the hostages fainted and the gunman released her.

Police surrounded the building and tried to negotiate with the gunman. When their efforts failed a Legion warrant officer entered the lounge and tried to wrestle the sub-machine-gun away from the man, who in turn threw a grenade which exploded in an adjoining room but caused no injuries.

The warrant officer then pulled out his pistol and killed the man with three bullets in the head, police said.

Police believed the man wanted to hijack the plane to Greece.

Helgafjel volcano in the past four days, after almost 1,000 years of inactivity. Icelandic officials feel that perhaps the only way to cap the volcano now is to bomb directly into the crater and seal the fissures now spewing lava on the island.

VESTMANNAEYJAR, Iceland (UPI) — The ground burst open in several new places around the erupting Helgafjel volcano today, spewing out new flows of lava.

Officials said even bombing the fiery crater from the air may not be able to save the deserted town.

Rescue officials said the situation has taken a turn for the worse with new eruptions expected at any time, even inside the town — once the prosperous fishing capital of Iceland.

The Icelandic government ordered everyone not directly connected with the rescue work to get off Heimaey Island.

The government has studied plans to bomb the volcano from the air in an attempt to divert at least part of the deadly lava flow and planes and bombs are standing by at the U.S. base near Reykjavik.

The few remaining islanders were told by radio to stay indoors because of poisonous sulphur gas fumes which give a suffocating feeling and cause coughing.

Police, firemen and civil defence workers have been issued gas masks.

The government, meeting in almost continuous emergency sessions since the volcano erupted Tuesday morning, has turned down requests from the 5,500 evacuated islanders to be allowed to go back and save their personal belongings.

Bulldozers are at work in the threatened eastern part of the town, building walls from hardened lava to try to stem the glowing flow from more than 15 craters spouting fire, gas and ashes.

Ashes and lava lie knee-deep in the streets of Vestmannaeyjar and rescue workers can use only jeeps for transportation.

Outwardly the ghost town remains intact except for a dozen wooden houses gutted by fire. Most of the houses are concrete structures.

OTTAWA — In spite of intensified government and private campaigns against smoking, cigarette consumption is up again by almost five per cent, according to industry statistics for 1972.

Cigarette production by the Big Four manufacturers represented by the Canadian Tobacco Manufacturers' Council jumped from 2,352 per capita in 1971 to 2,421 cigarettes per Canadian in 1972.

That works out to every man and child smoking seven cigarettes a day, every day, all year.

And federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde says he is concerned about this latest jump in cigarette consumption.

As a result, he has ordered his officials to provide him with a breakdown by age groups of the numbers of cigarette users.

Lalonde said "cutting" cigarette advertisements off of radio and television doesn't seem to have reduced consumption. Do we cut cigarette ads out of newspapers, too? And then do we make cigarettes available only by prescription?" he added, seemingly half in jest.

He indicated during a recent interview that he is particularly concerned that young people may be starting on or returning to the "evil weed" at a faster pace than the rest of the population.

Even if cigarette consumption among young people matched the overall average, that could still mean that the increase in smoking is outpacing the growth in population in Canada, now about 1.5 per cent.

Lalonde has also asked his officials to keep a close watch on the voluntary actions of cigarette manufacturers, if restricting advertising will help the problem.

WASHINGTON — The U.S. defence department today left open the possibility that bombing of the Ho Chi Minh trail and other Communist-held military targets in Laos and Cambodia will continue after the Vietnam ceasefire goes into effect Saturday.

Department spokesman Jerry Freidheim "ducked" direct comment on the issue when quizzed by newsmen today — only saying that the agreement only covered fighting in North and South Vietnam, not other Southeast Asian nations.

In Paris, Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh, foreign minister of the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government, said President Nixon violated the "spirit" of the ceasefire agreement when he maintained the Saigon regime was the only legal South Vietnamese government.

At a news conference she insisted its clauses recognize the legitimacy of the PRG as well.

She hammered away time and again during the hour-long conference on the theme that the agreement recognized two rival administrations, two armies and two zones of control.

"The spirit of Mr. Nixon's statement concerning the Saigon administration is not in conformity with the peace agreement," she said.

"We should like to believe that the American government has learned the lesson of this longest and most difficult war in its history," she added, "and that President Nixon now understands that no force, however brutal and no manoeuvre, however perfidious, can oblige the Vietnamese people to renounce its fundamental rights."

Two Americans and nearly 400 North and South Vietnamese were killed today, and Thursday in a storm of attacks across South Vietnam matched by the heaviest U.S. air strikes in eight months.

"The war's still on," said the commander of a U.S. marine air wing after the death of one of his young security guards during a rocket attack on the Bien Hoa air

Canada Has Plans In Case ...

OTTAWA — Defence Minister James Richardson said today Canada had several contingency plans for evacuating its peace-observers from Vietnam in the event of new hostilities. He did not elaborate.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said he had no indication that any of the parties to the peace agreement would hold Canada to the requirement that observer countries give three months' notice before withdrawing from the supervisory group.

What will Canada's Vietnam observers do if somebody shoots at them with something bigger than a rifle?

"Duck," says Richardson. "Dig a hole," an aide added when the question was put in the minister outside the Commons Thursday.

Richardson had just reiterated that the observers will be allowed to carry sidearms for personal safety, only other than that they would be unarmed.

Northerners Slam CBC for 'Old Man' Bias

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — "It's men like you who start revolutions," CBC Vice-President Marcel Oulmet was told Thursday in a bitter clash with a member of the Northwest territorial council.

Mr. Oulmet, Andrew Cowan, head of the CBC's northern service and Gordon Frederick, Yellowknife station manager, were under fire for what council members charged was inadequate service to northern people who depend on radio more than other Canadians.

"The North is a young man's country," Nick Sibbeston, elected member for Mackenzie-Liard, said to Mr. Oulmet. "If an old man like you can't do it and your station manager in Yellowknife can't do it, you'd better just shut her down."

Mr. Sibbeston, who is part

Indian, was criticizing the amount of native broadcasting on the CBC's Mackenzie network.

"The CBC is a white man's system," he said. "There is not one minute of Slavey that comes out on CFYK in a normal week."

SPEAKS SLAVEY
During the exchange, Mr. Sibbeston broke into Slavey and Mr. Oulmet countered in French. Mr. Sibbeston answered in French and then said angrily:

"Come back in Slavey, why don't you?"

"It's so frustrating dealing with you. It's men like you who start revolutions."

Mr. Frederick said English is the language of the majority in the area served by the Mackenzie network.

He said there are about 5,000 Slavey Indians in the area but 70 per cent of them speak English. The Cree, Dogrib and Chipewyan Indians in the area also generally speak English, he said.

"My responsibility is to the bulk of my listeners, not to the segregated groups."

SERVES 16,000
Mr. Frederick said there were 16,000 listeners in the area served by the Mackenzie network.

The CBC officials also were criticized by other council members because their northern service headquarters are located in southern Canada.

"The CBC has given us a most marvelous vehicle to ride but insists that we all stay outside and push while men from Ottawa steer," said Tom Butters, elected member for the Western Arctic.

David Searle, elected member for Yellowknife, said the absence of decision-making people in the North left the CBC unresponsive to northern audiences.

Mr. Oulmet said one of the CBC's "failures has been that we did not take enough care in the past as we should have of the native people."

Mr. Frederick said the format for the next year makes provision for one hour of broadcasting in native languages.

He added, however: "The majority of your own people don't even speak their own language."

Bryan Pearson, elected member for the Eastern Arctic, said it was often a joke trying to pick up the CBC northern service on shortwave in his constituency.

"It was easier to switch to Moscow Moly, Fort Wayne, Indiana, the BBC or Radio Netherlands broadcast from the Dutch Antilles."

"Rome wasn't built in a day," Mr. Oulmet replied. "No country is built in a day. We began building radio. We haven't finished building radio, but the monster of television fell on our shoulders."

"We hope that by next summer your news will come loud and clear and you won't have to listen to Moscow Moly."

Rights Aid Urged

A strong plea for the appointment of a provincial ombudsman was presented to directors of Victoria Chamber of Commerce today on the heels of hints the B.C. government has the post under consideration.

The chamber's government affairs committee has been studying the subject for months and now urges directors to adopt its report and ask the NDP government to act.

"I'm sure they (the government) are considering it," commented lawyer Marney Stevenson, a member of the B.C. Civil Liberties Union, who recalled the New Democratic Party while in opposition presented several ombudsman bills to the legislature.

The throne speech Thursday included the government's intention to bring in a B.C. Bill of Rights Act, which Mrs. Stevenson said would make the federal Human Rights Act more enforceable.

In its study the chamber committee under director Jack Hutchins — with members Alan Emery and Bill Staveland — found that in no jurisdiction where ombudsmen have been named has the post ever been abolished and that their "success is an indication of its worthiness."

The committee said that in B.C. the courts are not available in most instances involving disputes between individuals and government. It recognized that as government gets bigger and controls a greater segment of society, involvement will also increase.

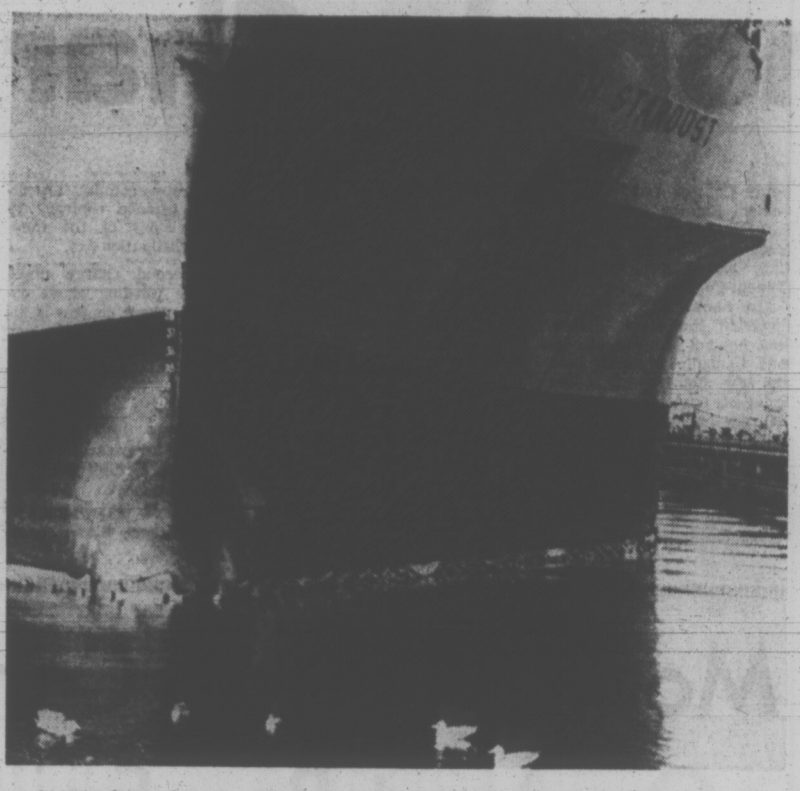

An ombudsman is needed in B.C. to provide "meaningful relief to aggrieved persons," the report said.

It noted the first ombudsman dates from 18th century Sweden and the system has been employed in Scandinavian countries almost ever since. The U.K., five Canadian provinces and some U.S. states are among the many jurisdictions now employing ombudsmen.

Hutchins' committee found the post to be "successful and worthwhile."

"The committee cannot think of a single disadvantage other than cost and embarrassment to the government" in the event of findings against departmental actions.

Over the long run the cost of keeping an ombudsman was considered by the committee to be incidental, and embarrassment to the government was "not a legitimate reason for not having the office."

resume today, Caird refused to give any information until the inquiry is completed. Capt. J. W. Ickeringill is in charge of the inquiry.

Among the ships converging on Alert Bay today were transport vessels Camell and Douglas, as well as the Alexander Mackenzie that normally operates out of Prince Rupert.

Clean Seas, a commercial company, will also be assisting in the mop-up.

Dr. Jack Pickup, mayor of Alert Bay, was too busy to be reached today.

A spokesman in his office, however, described gravel beaches on the east side of the island as being in "terrible" condition.

On Thursday, about 150 school children were let out of school early to help municipal crews and others in the village tackle the mess on the beaches.

If the Irish Stardust's master is found guilty of today's court charge, the transport official said he could be fined up to $1,000.

The freighter's owners, Irish Shipping of Dublin, should the inquiry go against them, could receive a maximum fine of $100,000 and ordered to pay the full cost of clean-up operations.

Under charter by Star Bulk Shipping (Canada) Ltd. of Vancouver, when she hit the rock, the Irish Stardust had a cargo of paper products aboard. She was bound from Kitimat to Port Mellon and from there to Japan.

The spot where she hit is in the same area where the B.C. ferry Queen of Prince Rupert grounded Aug. 11, 1967.

National attention was focused on the incident today when Tom Barnett, NDP Co-mox-Alberni, asked in the House of Commons what would be done to clean up "the largest oil spill yet" on the B.C. coast.

Environment Minister Jack Davis said it is being treated as a serious accident and Transport Minister Jean Mar-chand said his department is standing by for a comprehensive report.

Conservationists and others see the spill as a grim indication of the large-scale disasters that can be expected when larger vessels are used along the coastal shipping lanes.

Sierra Club president Ken Farquharson of Vancouver warned:

"Human error is a very significant factor in water transport. We won't be looking at 400 tons, but at 4,000 tons in the future."

Job positions are also the subject of two of the questions asked by Hugh Curtis (P.C.—Saanich and the Islands).

Curtis wants to know how many new jobs have been created in the offices of the premier and the minister of finance — Barrett's dual portfolios — since Sept. 1, 1972. He asks for the names, titles and "agreed salaries" of any persons engaged.

$50-a-Ton Dogfish Bounty Set

A $50-a-ton bounty on dogfish on the West Coast has been imposed by the federal fisheries department.

Environment Minister Jack Davis said today that $500,000 will be allocated annually for the "eradication" program.

And, as a bonus to commercial fishermen to take dogfish, the department has added a bonus — a quota of two tons of herring.

The department this year placed a partial ban in April 1972 on the herring fishing in Strait of Georgia, allowing only a small amount to be taken for bait.

In other areas the commercial fishermen are allowed to take herring for roe which is sold to Japan.

The bonus for the dogfish will allow fishermen to take their allotted catch of herring in the Strait or where ever they catch the dogfish.

At present there is little market for the dogfish.

Fisheries officials say the fish is a plague in the Straits and a major nuisance to sports fishermen.

It is hoped that with the bounty and experiments being carried out by some canneries, a market in Europe or Asia might be found.

A fisheries department committee is working out details for the payment of the bounty and method of disposing of the dogfish.

Throne Speech 'Vague'

Leaders of the three opposition parties in the B.C. legislature were unanimous in their disappointment with the speech from the throne read in the house Thursday.

Social Credit house leader Frank Richter, Liberal leader David Anderson and Progressive Conservative house leader Scott Wallace each said the government should have come up with more in outlining its plans for the first full session of the house, including measures to deal with the serious problem of unemployment.

Richter, commenting in the absence of Opposition leader W. A. C. Bennett, described the direction outlined by Barrett as "vague generalities," most of which had been released previously in statements by the premier or cabinet ministers.

"It sounded like the Sermon from the Mount, with the omission of verses one, two, three, four, five and six," Richter said.

The MLA from Boundary-Similkameen said the speech showed nothing of Barrett's political philosophy. It should deal with unemployment, he said, which has now become a "very, very serious problem" in the province.

GOOD PLUM

He also said there should have been encouragement of secondary and primary industry "because it is the basic industries which provide sound long-term employment."

Richter described the government's plan to create 1,000 new jobs in the civil service as "a real good plum crop, going back to the good old pork barrel." He added that creation of such jobs as executive assistants to cabinet ministers have served only as a "wedge" between the public and the government, making communication more difficult.

Although Premier Barrett had earlier outlined to reporters his intention to create an industrial development corporation, Richter was not aware of this and said lack of such legislation is an indication of the government's no-growth policies.

"We are in a sick situation in B.C.," Richter said.

SURPRISED

Liberal leader Anderson said he was surprised that the New Democratic Party did not give some indication of the direction it would take during its term of office.

"What a golden opportunity was missed to outline a philosophy to govern the province for the next four years."

There was no plan of action indicated in the speech and in particular no word on government measures to ease unemployment, beyond mass hiring in the civil service.

Anderson said the unemployment level of 8.3 per cent was far higher now than at any time under the Social Credit government.

It was too early to tell if the 1,000 civil service jobs would fill a need or simply add to bureaucracy.

SOME WORTHWHILE

It would have been better to outline the needs department by department rather than go on a campaign of massive recruitment, he said.

In some cases, expanding the civil service might be worthwhile. For example the consumer affairs department only has a staff of two and could use five more, Anderson said.

Staff should be increased in response to need not because the hiring quota for a department has been increased.

He said he will be watching for some indication the provincial government is planning strong steps to deal with unemployment.

He added he was surprised there was no mention of collective bargaining in the throne speech, a matter which was thought to be a high priority for the NDP.

DISAPPOINTMENTS

A one-word description of the throne speech came from Conservative house leader Scott Wallace — "disappointing."

Wallace said the speech was disappointing for several reasons: its vagueness, its failure to define the subjects that were mentioned and mainly because certain major areas of provincial concern, such as the economy, unemployment and urban problems, were omitted entirely.

"The only comment on jobs which is the No. 1 priority, seems to be to increase the bureaucracy in the province by hiring another 1,000 civil servants," he said.

"This is not a positive, constructive way to create jobs,"

Wallace said, as there was no apparent provision for increasing exports or encouraging secondary industry.

He did concede, however, that some "useful purpose" would be served if the extra jobs included additional staff for such departments as the Fish and Wildlife Branch, to allow it to carry out proper supervision of fish-bearing streams and rivers.

AMBULANCES

Wallace said the aspect of the speech which he is "excited about" is the reference to a provincial ambulance services act.

He interprets the brief reference as indicating the government's intention to provide "integrated ambulance services on a regional basis and to spell out the basis of training for ambulance attendants."

Wallace said he was "amazed" that a government which owed its election success to such major policy declarations as an awareness of the needs of municipalities had neglected that subject entirely in the throne speech.

He noted that when Barrett was leader of the Opposition he had consistently criticized the then premier for presenting throne speeches devoid of substance on which to base a two-week debate.

"Yet here we have the new premier doing the very thing for which he criticized his predecessor," he said.

A spokesman for the B.C. Government Employees Union said today there is a definite need in the province for more personnel officers in government service and suggested some of the 1,000 new civil service jobs promised in the throne speech could go to this area.

Pollution Laws Fall Before Fuel Crisis

Times News Services
NEW YORK — Six eastern states have been asked to relax air pollution standards so oil companies can fight the current fuel shortage with lower-grade "dirty" fuel oil.

The oil companies have gone to Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, requesting permission to burn oil with a higher sulfur content than those states allow.

The oil companies say they have enough of the lower-grade oil to relieve the shortage.

3 People Stabbed To Death

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI)

A young hippie mother and her two children have been found stabbed to death in a mountain cabin at the end of a lonely lane.

The sheriff's office said the bodies were found by a neighbor who went to check on the woman and her sons aged 9 and 3.

The woman's common law husband was away at the time. Police are looking for him.

The names of the victims have been withheld until he is found and the woman's family notified.

Deputies said they had not found the murder weapon, had no suspects and did not know the motive.

The family was described by deputies as "hippie," with the mother and father living on welfare in "very poor circumstances," although the children appeared to have been well cared for.

White Collar Organizing Under Way

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) launched a campaign Thursday aimed at unionizing many of Canada's estimated two million white-collar workers.

The CLC announced at a press conference that it is concentrating on banks, insurance companies, trust companies, finance companies, stock exchanges and real estate firms.

William Dodge, secretary-treasurer, referred to the white-collar workers as a "much-exploited group."

The campaign is to begin in Toronto with efforts to enlist the more than 300,000 unorganized white-collar workers here into the Association of Commercial and Technical Employees (ACTE).

So far, the only state to permit the sale of dirtier oil is New York.

Texaco won a variance from the city of New York that will allow it to sell 12 million gallons of No. 4 and No. 6 heating oils with a sulfur content of 2 per cent, which is eight to 10 times as much sulfur as New York's laws permit.

The city put a penalty on the sale, which calls for Texaco to pay New York $2 for every barrel of the high-sulfur oil it sells. The city also insisted that buyers of the high-sulfur oil prove that they can not get low-sulfur oil from another supplier.

At the same time that it granted Texaco its variance, New York City issued a regulation allowing the entire oil industry to sell residual heating oils with a sulfur content of 1 per cent, three times what the law allows. Both variances are good for the next 45 days.

New York State followed New York City's action with the granting of a similar variance, but it was unclear if any of the other five states would go along with the requests to alter their pollution laws. It was also unclear what role the Environmental Protection Agency might take, since EPA has said that it must approve any amendment to state plans on air pollution.

While all this was going on, former White House energy adviser David Freeman blamed the fuel shortage on President Nixon's reluctance to end the quotas on oil imports.

"This winter's so-called energy crisis was manufactured right here in Washington," Freeman said in a speech to the Consumer Federation of America. "It could have been averted with the stroke of a pen."

Freeman was referring to Nixon's rejection three years ago of a cabinet-level study group recommendation to scrap the oil import quota system. The system, which restricts the amount of oil which can be imported, should have been replaced by tariffs to increase supplies and drive down prices, the task force said.

Second of the Thirtieth

The Throne Speech delivered yesterday at the opening of the Legislature is a skimpy one as such addresses go, but it is not, of course, to be taken as the full agenda for the forthcoming debates. With only the items mentioned there would still be plenty of scope for the occupants of both sides of the House to display their statesmanship, and to restrain their bouts of cheap, schoolyard bickering that year after year anger and disgust the public.

The government plan for an automobile insurance system was, of course, expected. More information on the scheme will be revealed in discussion of the bill, particularly what both government and opposition have learned of the situation in the two other provinces where such plans are in operation. The general public reception of the idea, broached some time ago, has been one of wait-and-see.

A definitely cheaper rate for benefits equivalent to those now received from private plans would prove popular. But the prospect of banning all competition with a government scheme arouses some question as to whether this would be in the interests of low rates. And of further public concern is the question of charging possible deficits to general revenue — a move which would take the whole plan out of the normal business realm. These are points which should be made perfectly clear to the public before any bill is allowed to pass.

Amendments to the Park Act and the Litter Act suggest improvements in both these fields. A proposed provincial bill of rights should spark some discussion. Bills of rights can rarely go beyond the rights which custom has ingrained in society. There must be public acceptance of, and insistence on, rights before they can become effective elements of our lives.

Examples abound in situations where, for example, discrimination in housing may be abolished by law, yet established intolerance continues to frustrate the intent of the act. A bill of rights, too, may limit rights as well as establish them, and it is subject to change by subsequent legislatures. There is no better safeguard for individuals rights than a society devoted to the ideal.

Reference to "the continuing study of the effects of the consumption of and the advertising of tobacco and alcoholic products" came on the same day as the release of a federal report showing a five per cent increase in cigarette consumption in Canada last year, despite restrictions on advertising. The increasing evidence of the sorry effects of tobacco make this a major issue.

The government has cleverly described its intention to employ another 1,000 civil servants (there are already 31,000) in the guise of cashing in on the expensive education of the young, and an effort to provide quality services by skilled people. In the final years of the Social Credit administration we were told that efforts were being made to reduce the numbers of civil servants, as these had grown excessively. Now, only a few months later, we learn that the reverse is true, and that we must spend further millions on additional employees. It will be interesting to see just what the new jobs are, and who gets them.

MAURICE WESTERN

A Stiffer Take-Over Policy

OTTAWA — The take-over legislation has been revised and Gallupized. Alastair Gillespie's bill, which received first reading on Wednesday, avowedly reflects a political judgment based on polls and provincial soundings that the country favors a tougher measure than that sponsored last year by Jean-Luc Pepin.

It is apparent from a first inspection of this very complicated Bill that the Government has stiffened its policy in at least three respects. The test of "significant benefit to Canada" is no longer to be applied solely to take-overs although for some months, and perhaps for as much as a year, this will be Mr. Gillespie's primary concern. With proclamation of section 6, the minister will also screen new businesses being established by outside capital.

'Unrelated Business'

In addition, firms already operating in Canada but controlled from abroad will be affected by the new concept of "unrelated business." A company would be free to expand without having to undergo Ministerial scrutiny if the new ventures were considered essentially similar to existing enterprise. If it sought to diversify, however, into "unrelated business," it would become subject to the test of significant benefit.

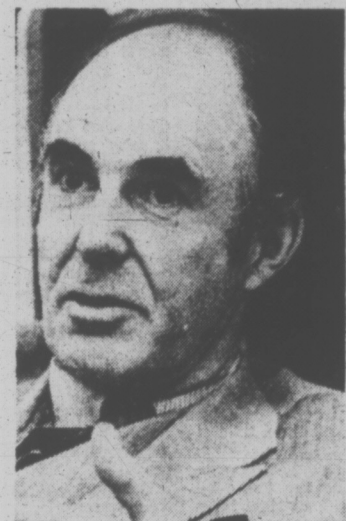

The Government also proposes to tighten the net by dropping the "threshold" provisions. As originally planned, the screening procedures would have applied only to businesses exceeding a stated size. There will now be no "threshold" for new investment since even the unscreened and previously unconsidered might well demonstrate an unexpected capacity for growth. In the same way, there will be a zero threshold for non-eligible persons contemplating take-overs and also for subsidiaries expanding into "unrelated" business.

If the foreign threat is as serious as the Government believes, Mr. Gillespie will certainly be a busy Minister. It is true that the Registrar contemplated in the former abortive legislation is now to have the status of a Commissioner.

But while this may well increase his prestige, and perhaps his remuneration, it does not appear that his actual role has been greatly enlarged. It will be the Minister, relying, of course, on whatever advice is available, who will make the judgments, bear responsibility for negotiations leading to more "significant" benefits, and consult with provincial governments whose interests may be affected.

How, with these onerous additional burdens will Mr. Gillespie find time for all those other important matters which until now have fully occupied Ministers of Trade and Commerce?

"Significant benefit" is obviously a most important concept; equally obviously, it is one which defies definition. Instead, it is to be appraised in relation to five factors. Among these are the effect of an acquisition or establishment "on the level and nature of economic activity in Canada, including employment"; on competition "within any industry or industries in Canada"; on productivity, industrial efficiency, technological development, product innovation and product variety in Canada; compatibility with national and provincial industrial and economic policies; and the degree and significance of participation by Canadians in the business.

According to Mr. Gillespie, "the mix may vary." Considering the nature of these general guidelines, it is impossible to see how it could fail to vary. In other words questions of investment are to be matters of Ministerial discretion. It will never be possible to know whether there is any uniformity of treatment in dealings with different firms in relatively similar situations.

It is not the intention of the present Minister to use the new powers to divert enterprise from one province towards another. But legislation exists independently of ministerial intentions which may vary from year to year or from one Government to another. Once great powers are accorded to government, no one can say how they will be used or by whom.

Provincial Politics

As the policies of the provinces, which are to be taken into account, may also differ, the terms of business entry into provincial sectors of the Canadian common market may also be expected to vary. The implications of this will need to be carefully examined when the Bill is considered in Parliament.

There are other terms which will have to be given clearer meaning; especially "related" and "unrelated" businesses. It may be that a chocolate firm should not go into electronics; will it be permissible to diversify into mince pies? Apparently, it has not yet been decided whether the legislation will be supplemented by regulations or improved with guidelines. There may be some danger that, in judgments on relevancy, Mr. Gillespie will have to rely on another mix.

The new bill does not deal with licensing arrangements for the import on technology. An additional measure is to be submitted covering the third phase of the Government's protective effort. Perhaps this will be of a transitory nature. What is now contemplated in this direction will not go beyond registration. Anything in the way of screening is for the future. The Minister is probably wise to limit himself in this fashion since the probability is that the two bills will be quite enough to keep him fully occupied for some time. Heaven is not reached at a single bound, even in the department of industry, trade and commerce.

From The Times of Jan. 26, 1913:

Letter to the Editor:
Some days ago a number of men were sitting in the lobby of a hotel engaged in conversation when the subject of provincial politics came up. One man said that large areas of agricultural lands were being alienated, timber and coal licenses issued, and that all or nearly all of the money so raised was being paid out for current expenses. He pointed out that the expenditure was enormously larger per capita than in any other province or colony; that no audit of public accounts could be obtained, and therefore it was not unreasonable to suspect very serious misappropriation of the public funds. This letter is written in the hope it will cause the voters to wake up to conditions as they exist. Onlooker.

Wear and Tear in the Wilds

The report comes from Salisbury, Rhodesia, but has been paralleled in other countries before, and will be again. The authorities have found the traffic of tourists to Victoria Falls on the Zambezi so heavy that the natural amenities are wearing out. In consequence efforts will be made to keep the visitors to cemented paths along routes enclosed by wire fencing, with gates provided for access at designated points.

A somewhat similar situation occurred in the vicinity of Old Faithful in Yellowstone National Park when commercial development was allowed too close to the geyser and patrons seriously injured the surroundings by the sheer weight of their numbers walking about. Legislation phased out this commercial development — locating lodges and motels farther away — and established controls on trails open to the public.

The problem is known to British Columbia's parks department, though even the increasing volume of visitors has not yet seriously impaired major parks. As one means of protecting the Black Tusk meadows, a fragile attraction in Garibaldi, motor roads were stopped short of the area and only those prepared to hike in can see the meadow beauties — an effective way of reducing crowds.

Concern is now being expressed about the Bowron Lakes circuit, where canoeist groups are trampling the portages, over-using certain camp sites and, in time, could frighten away the creatures of the wild which make that region particularly attractive.

The parks branch adopts a practical philosophy toward these dangers. It seeks to keep parks and wilderness areas available mainly to those seriously interested in them — not to an idly curious general public that transports unsuitable recreational activity with it to points of scenic beauty, and leaves the empties behind.

In the Bowron Lakes area a useful concept is being explored. It directs the visitors' attention to amenities other than the heavily travelled lake chain, encouraging hikers to follow trails that lead to other attractions in the general area.

At this point in time, British Columbia does not suffer to the extent that Rhodesia does in relation to Victoria Falls, or the United States in Yellowstone park, but provincial authorities read the warnings. So far their persuasion and public education seem to be effective. With general and informed support from visitors, these mild methods could continue to succeed.

C. L. SULZBERGER

'Natural Relations' Continue

LONDON — When Prime Minister Edward Heath visits President Nixon in Washington Feb. 1 and 2, it will be the first time he has seen the American chief of state not only as head of the British Government but also as representative of one of nine partners in the European Community which the United Kingdom joined just a fortnight ago.

French President de Gaulle, while he was in office, insistently vetoed Britain's application for Common Market membership on the grounds that it was not a genuinely "European" country and also claiming that, because of its "special relationships" with the United States, it would serve as Washington's "Trojan horse" within the Community. It is interesting to consider Heath's own feelings on the changed situation between Britain and the United States, if indeed it has really changed, as a result of Britain's final entry.

No Change

The impression one gets is that the Prime Minister feels entirely relaxed on the subject. He seems unconvinced that things have altered in any sense, at least with a view to London's transatlantic connection with the U.S.A. or, for that matter, with English-speaking Commonwealth lands such as Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

Heath believes the Anglo-American relationship is not "special" but "natural." He made this clear at the end of 1970 on a previous visit to Mr. Nixon. When the president spoke of a "special" relationship, Heath replied with the phrase "natural relations," which he regards as closer to the real fact.

What he obviously means by this distinction is that there are particular ties between the two countries because of their common language, their long joint history, their similar approach to common law and their close alliance during two world wars.

For these combined reasons he sees no necessity for diminishing the bond just because Britain has now joined the European club. On the contrary, why shouldn't things go on as in the past? If one thinks in terms of a "special" rather than a "natural" relationship, isn't it true that Chancellor Willy Brandt has "special" relations with Washington?

There is, of course, one inescapable difference stemming from intimate Anglo-American collaboration on nuclear development during World War II which, after the McMahon Act, continued to allow only Britain access to certain se-Pompidou, contemplates such a development for a long time to come. Therefore the topic is hardly likely to arise in the forthcoming, Washington colloquy with Mr. Nixon.

Likewise, just as the gradual maturation of new relationships between Britain and Europe requires no abrupt switch in relationships between Britain and the United States, it is clear Heath sees a similar historical gradualism affecting ties between the United Kingdom and English-speaking members of the Commonwealth like Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

History had already altered these connections long before Britain entered the European Community Jan. 1, 1973. Thus, Canada has never been in the sterling area and is dominated by the United States economy.

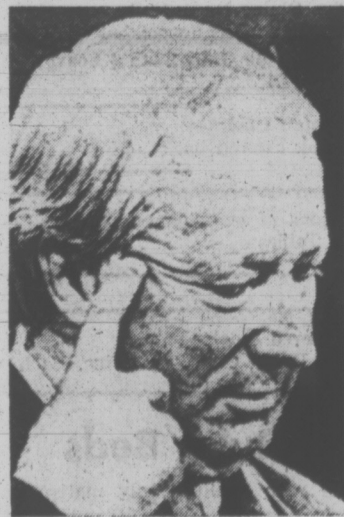

New Avenues

Nevertheless, Mr. Heath received the impression when he visited Ottawa this month for the funeral of former Prime Minister Lester Pearson that Canada, which had once objected to British membership in the Common Market, now welcomed the move as opening up new avenues to Europe.

History had similarly diluted British links with Australia and New Zealand. Shortly after the Second World War the ANZUS treaty was signed between them and the United States, establishing Pacific defence arrangements that did not include Britain. Now once more, as a result of new elections, change was in the air and they re-examined their policies.

But none of this had anything to do with the Common Market's expansion or British inclusion. That was part of a natural evolution and natural policy just as "natural" relationships between the British and the Americans remained essentially unaffected. The latter are based on a commonality of ties and a joint experience rather than an artificially or distinctively "special" and consequently exclusive understanding.

crets, a fact resented by France, especially under General de Gaulle.

On this subject Heath expressed himself before he was prime minister in the 1967 Godkin Lectures at Harvard. He suggested that "a European defence system ... might ... include a nuclear force based on the existing British and French forces which could be held in trusteeship for Europe as a whole."

While Heath hasn't abandoned that vision, neither he nor his Common Market colleague, French President Georges

'Advanced' Canada Slips Back

By ROBERT CHODOS
Last Post

Anyone looking for stimulating reading on some of the most important issues facing this country would be unlikely to turn toward the federal bureaucracy in Ottawa.

He would be less likely still to turn to an agency whose purpose, according to the legislation under which it was established, is "to assess in a comprehensive manner Canada's scientific and technological resources, requirements and potentialities and to make recommendations thereon to the minister."

But people have come to expect surprises from the Science Council of Canada.

The Science Council's report on manufacturing innovation in a Cold Climate, was released in October 1971. The report sought to demonstrate that manufacturing in Canada is in a state of crisis, and to explain why. It contained little to comfort those who believe that all we need to create more jobs is more foreign investment.

"Between 1961 and 1967," it said, "manufacturing employment increased almost 25 per cent. In 1968 this growth began to falter, and employment has now remained essentially static for the last two years. This development can be traced to a levelling off (and in many cases a decline) in employment in precisely those industries that contributed most heavily to new employment in the first half of the sixties."

Nor did the council see any sign that this trend is likely to reverse itself.

"Canada's economy in this decade will increasingly become dependent on the resource and service industries. Resource industries offer limited opportunities for employment; furthermore, much of their profit does not remain in Canada. This funneling of funds out of the country is likely to stunt the growth of our service industries."

"Our participation in international trade will become less and less significant, and we will become — once again — mainly suppliers of raw materials to the North American continent."

The report found one overriding reason for this situation: the inability of Canadian industry to innovate.

This means more than just the failure to do research and development (R and D), with which innovation is often associated. Innovation is a chain leading from an initial conception to the actual manufacture of the product, and rarely is that chain followed through from beginning to end in Canada. Even when ideas do originate in Canada, they are generally brought to fruition somewhere else.

Innovation in a Cold Climate, which was the Science Council's collective assessment of the situation, was only the beginning.

Since the appearance of the report, two of its background studies have been published: The Multinational Firm, Foreign Direct Investment, and Canadian Science Policy by Arthur Cordell, an economist with council's staff, appeared in December 1971, and Innovation and the Structure of Canadian Industry by Pierre Bourgault, who left the council in April 1971 to become dean of applied sciences at the University of Sherbrooke, appeared in November 1972.

Together they dispel any notion that Innovation in a Cold Climate was overly alarmist, and lend weight to its conclusions with detailed information.

Cordell finds the problems of Canada as a headquarters

Industrial Research Technology Stagnating

for firms expanding their operations into the United States similar to those of Sweden as a headquarters for firms expanding their operations into the European Common Market. It was the head of Volvo's Göttenburg plant who said that "we have come to the point where the company has outgrown the country," but it could as easily have been an executive of a Canadian multinational.

Pierre Bourgault's study covers much of the same ground as Innovation in a Cold Climate. But it is more than twice as long and, perhaps because it represents Bourgault's own views rather than the collective views of the Science Council, it pulls fewer punches.

Bourgault challenges the very assumption that Canada is an advanced industrial country, and finds that, at the very least, Canada is not considered to be an advanced industrial country by the executives of large multinational firms.

"A senior executive of a large U.S. science-based company, who is also on the board of directors of the Canadian

MCTAGGART-COWAN
... 'they know'

subsidiary (whose sales are $100 million plus per annum) told us flatly that it was his view of Canada that was a developing nation, and that it was foolish of us to try to act like an industrially developed nation in competition in world markets.

"Another executive, a director of the U.K. firm as well as a director of its Canadian subsidiary (a science-based secondary manufacturing company), stated:

"You're as a resource-based economy... why not do the things you are good at? You can grow wheat more efficiently than most, you have unexploited minerals and oil fields. Why do you want to get into the rat race of high-technology industry? Other countries are so far ahead of you now, it would be almost impossible to catch up."

"Needless to say, neither of these executives was very optimistic about the future of his Canadian 'high-technology' operation."

"In the course of our discussions with persons in the British, French and Belgian governments, and in the Organization of Economic Co-operation and Development, it was often conveyed to us that, in terms of technological capability, Canada is not considered to be on a par with the larger countries of Europe (Germany, France, U.K., etc.) nor even on a par with some of the smaller industrialized countries (such as Sweden, The Netherlands and Switzerland)."

The picture of the Canadian economy that emerges from Bourgault's study is of one somewhere in between the manufacturing-based economies of the advanced industrial countries and the resource-based economies of the third world.

But perhaps the most disturbing conclusion Bourgault comes to is that we have lost — and are continuing to lose — advantages that can never be made up.

This is because of the "learning curve" — jargon for the observation that the time required to perform a manual operation is reduced the more times the operation is repeated. This applies as well to automated operations (where the "learning" is done by those responsible for designing the production process) and whole systems. It's related to the idea of

"economies of scale" — the more units a manufacturer produces, the lower his cost per unit, but, says Bourgault, it "goes beyond the simple 'economies of scale' concept by implying that it is important to enter a field early and to develop it quickly, in order to gain the advantage of 'cumulative experience'."

And the situation is not only not getting better; it is getting worse:

"Fifteen years ago we were developing highly sophisticated military aircraft, but that capability no longer exists; 10 years ago we had some limited capability in automotive engineering, and today that multi-billion-dollar industry provides virtually no stimulus to innovation in the industrial infrastructure; a little over a decade ago, a Canadian company designed and built a large computer comparable to the best available at that time, and that too has vanished from the scene; within the past five years, the development and engineering capability of our chemical industry has withered very visibly."

The cumulative effect of the Science Council's criticism of Canadian industry is to provide a scenario, already well advanced, for the de-industrialization of Canada. Because of the source of the criticism and its impressive documentation, it cannot be easily dismissed.

Patrick McTaggart-Cowan, executive secretary of the council, says that industry has responded positively to the Science Council's criticism, that "they know they've got problems." He adds that "the message that Arthur Cordell got from the multinationals was 'you write the rules and we'll conform.'"

However, the rules have not yet been written, the strategy has not yet been spelled out. Industry has not yet been faced with the need to make hard choices. Its record of fierce opposition to even the mildest legislation designed to make it conform more closely with Canadian national interests, like the present government's tax-reform package or competition act, is not encouraging.

Nor is it just the foreign multinationals that are involved. The flight of such as E. P. Taylor and K. C. Irving to tax havens in the Caribbean attests to their deep commitment to Canadian national goals.

to talk with people. The rule seems to be, you can look but you can't speak. Ah, well, most days there is a good bit to see.

The other day in my own supermarket, for example, there was a woman who was sneakily lifting the cardboard lids on Sara Lee frozen coffee cakes and peeking under, eyeball to coffee cake, to see if — what?

Could she have misplaced something? Did she suspect that the contents were not as advertised? Whatever her purpose, she didn't buy.

Another woman was kneading a long package of white bread with her fingertips, rather like a doctor going over an abdomen for a yelp of pain that might confirm appendicitis. I had seen those imbecilic women in the television commercial squeeze toilet paper, and so was prepared for almost anything, but this medical examination of the bread was startling.

The woman, incidentally, did not buy. She left the store without a single purchase. This may have been because she looked at the "express check-out" line, saw that it would take 45 minutes to pay for her bread, and decided bread was not worth the wait.

(I am making a study of how supermarket managers manage to make the "express check-out" line the slowest in the store, and will report when interviews are completed.)

I suspect, of that woman who left empty-handed, that she never intended to buy. I think she had simply become lonely sitting alone in her flat, or had begun to feel claustrophobic perhaps with her family, and had decided to go out to the supermarket and knead a loaf of white bread for the pure fun of feeling herself part of the great busy world.

Everything in the Open?

By BOB HUNTER
The Sun

In December, Premier Dave Barrett said a very impressive thing. He said he was going to try to steer his government toward a policy of "no more secrets."

Precisely, he said: "What I find us moving to as a government is... no more secrets. No more secrets."

He was talking about his government's relations with B.C.'s numerous environmental groups, and he said:

"I think that too many of the problems we fight issue by issue on environmental issues do damage to governments, do damage to environmentalists, do damage to industrialists and do damage to the population as a whole — because there's so much emotion."

"I think there has to be a lot more hard facts when we are dealing on an issue-by-issue basis. So what we are going to work towards is just opening everything up. We'll get a report and make it public so that everybody discusses it."

"Everything out in the open."

Meanwhile, elsewhere in the Legislative Building, an exchange of correspondence was continuing between Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich, Provincial Entomologist C. O. Neilson and Steve Boyce, executive secretary of S.P.E.C.

Boyce had written in October to the department of agriculture asking for some specific figures on pesticide residues. A reply came back from entomologist Neilson, Stupich's chief bureaucrat, explaining that it was "department policy" to withhold this particular kind of information. The policy had been "endorsed by the minister of agriculture under the Social Credit government."

"I have referred the policy to the Honorable D. Stupich, our present minister, and as soon as his review is completed you will be informed accordingly," wrote Neilson.

Replied Boyce: "After years of being denied public information, S.P.E.C. looks forward to a refreshing change."

In November, Boyce tried again, asking specifically for a copy of a report on Mundrean herbicide residues. A reply came back from Neilson, advising him that "samples taken by government staff for pesticide analysis are normally taken for survey purposes and/or in connection with disciplinary action. In these instances, exact residue figures are not released, but appropriate action taken, if needed."

In other words: Go eat your hat, S.P.E.C.

Boyce wrote back asking who had established the current policy and who was responsible for it.

The next letter was from Stupich himself (the emphases are mine):

"It is the policy of the present government that most government documents be made available to the public. The department of agriculture certainly agrees with this policy."

"However, there are certain pesticide (and other) analysis data which should, for various good reasons, be treated as 'classified' and, therefore, limited. Certainly there are times when the release of such data would not be in the public interest, particularly when proper interpretation of such data is essential and without which erroneous conclusions could readily be drawn."

The agriculture minister cited a couple of situations where "undue and unwarranted attention and consequent loss of business may well result" to firms which had been caught violating the regulations. He didn't seem to think that it would be fair to "unduly" punish the culprits by letting their identity become known to the public.

"In summary," Stupich wrote, "the policy of the B.C. department of agriculture will be to make pesticide residue information 'open and available' except where in the opinion of the minister such information should be considered as classified and will then be available only to responsible persons on a 'need to know' basis."

"I understand this policy is not unlike that followed in other departments which deal with somewhat similar analysis, diagnosis, examinations and like matters."

Boyce's reply to Stupich is worth recording:

"Dear Mr. Stupich, in the final analysis I cannot see any difference between this policy and that of the previous government... With respect to my request, I see (these) policies being utilized to shield the government from criticism and to inhibit policy changes."

And if I may add a footnote:

"Dear Mr. Barrett, which will it be? Everything out in the open? Or just some things out in the open? There's a huge difference."

MIDDLE CLASS WELFARE

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

Should a family whose income is $25,000 a year continue to get $6 or $8 or $10 a month for each dependent child?

Before last fall's election, the Liberal government of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said no. It introduced a Family Income Security Plan (FISP) which would have cut family allowances off entirely for upper-income families, reduced them for middle-income families, and paid substantially more to low-income groups. The amounts were to have been determined by a needs test basically similar to that used to decide who among old-age pensioners gets a supplement to guarantee an income of $130 a month.

The plan wasn't adopted by the last Parliament and now the government has decided to continue to pay the allowances to all Canadian families but to pay larger amounts to those with low incomes. Health Minister Marc Lalonde said in the Throne Speech debate that he would present the new plan to the House before the April federal-provincial conference of welfare ministers so it can be discussed there as well as in the Commons.

The original plan encountered heavy opposition even though a Gallup Poll found a majority of Canadians in favor of cutting off family allowances for the well-to-do in order to pay more to the needy.

In Parliament both Conservatives and New Democrats opposed it, no doubt reflecting the views of their constituents who, though they paid lip service to the idea of baby bonuses only for those who need them, still liked the idea of their own little "welfare" cheque.

Some provincial governments opposed the legislation because they have their own proposals for income security measures and want the family allowance money to go to them instead.

So the reform died on the order paper with the last Parliament; and no one should be surprised that a new Liberal government in a minority position in the House of Commons, dependent for its survival on the support of another party, does not reintroduce it in its original form.

Yet the principle of a needs test for family allowances, as for the guaranteed income supplement and other social assistance benefits, is a good one and is becoming increasingly acceptable to Canadians.

Although details of the new baby bonus program are not yet known, it's certain that the total cost will be higher unless steps are taken to recover, through the income tax, money paid to higher-income families.

Such tax-reform proposals were made in 1971 by a task force on social security appointed by the Canadian Council on Social Development to study income security legislation. The task force recommended that taxable family allowances be paid to everyone but that a special tax rate schedule be adopted to enable 100 per cent retrieval at some given point. The task force also recommended that income tax exemptions for dependent children be abolished because they tend to be worth more to high than to low-income earners.

Supermarket Syndrome

I often go to the supermarket for the pure fun of it, and I suspect a lot of other people do too. The supermarket fills some of the same needs the neighborhood saloon used to satisfy. There you can mix with neighbors when you are lonely, or feeling claustrophobic with family, or when you simply feel the urge to get out and be part of the busy, interesting world.

As in the old neighborhood saloon, something is being sold, and this helps clothe the visit in wholesome material purpose. The national character tends to fear acts performed solely for pleasure; even our sexual hedonists usually justify themselves with the thought that they are doing a higher duty to social reform or mental hygiene.

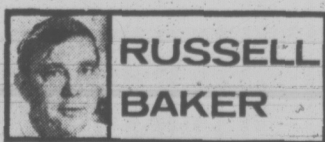

It is hard to define the precise pleasures of the supermarket. Unlike the saloon, it does not hold out promise of drugged senses, commonly considered basic to pleasure.

There is, to be sure, the brilliant color of the fruit-and-vegetable department to lift the spirit out of grey January's weariness, provided you do not look at the prices.

There are fantastic riches of point-less variety to make the mind delight in the excess that is American. In my neighborhood supermarket, for example, there are twenty or thirty yards of nothing but paper towels of varying colors, patterns and thicknesses.

What an amazing country that can make it so hard for a man to choose among things designed for the purpose of being thrown away!

The people, however, are the real lure. As in the traditional saloon, there are many who seem determined to leave nothing for anybody else. These sources prowling the aisles with carts overflowing with excesses of consumption. Twenty pounds of red meat, back-breaking cartons of powdered soap, onions wrapped lovingly in molded plastic, peanut butter by the hundred-weight, cake mixes, sugar, oils, whole pineapples, wheels of cheese, candied watermelon rind, preserved camel humps from Persia.

Groaning and sweating, they heave their tonnage up to the checker, see it packed in a forest's worth of paper bags, and the whole now reassembled as a tower of bags pyramided on another cart, they stagger off to their cars, drained of their wealth but filled with pride in their awesome capacity for consumption.

At times, seeing such a customer trying to buy up the whole supermarket, one is tempted to say, "Come now, my good woman, you've had enough for the day." Unfortunately, the abundance of supermarkets does not encourage verbal exchange. In this it is inferior to the saloon.

Urban people, of course, are terribly scared nowadays. They may yearn for society, but it is risky to go around talking to strangers, for a lot of reasons, one being that people are so accustomed not to have many human contacts that they are afraid they may find out they really prefer life that way.

Whatever the reason, they go to the supermarket to be with people, but not

FACULTY 'TOO BIG'

Division of the faculty of arts and sciences at the University of Victoria has the support of the dean of the faculty, Prof. Jean-Paul Vinay.

"The faculty is getting very large," said Vinay Thursday. It now covers 19 departments, possibly 20 if a new creative writing department falls under the faculty.

"It is very difficult for one dean, even with an assistant dean, to be effective in all directions," he said.

Division of the faculty into separate faculties of arts and science was one of the recommendations in the 50-page Jennings report on academic governance, released Wednesday.

The report was prepared by a six-man commission, headed by Dean of Graduate Studies Dr. Stephen Jennings, appointed last January by university president Dr. Hugh Farquhar.

Dr. John Greene, president of UVic's faculty association, is against division of the faculty.

"Faculty meetings are the only times people in the humanities meet people in the sciences," Greene said.

This mixing is useful, he said, and wouldn't happen with creation of separate faculties.

Division of the faculty was discussed and rejected four years ago, Greene said.

Vinay said that although he favored division, he favored division into three faculties—arts, science, and social science—rather than two, as recommended in the report.

"Social sciences are in between," he said. Departments like psychology and maths are not purely humanities subjects, so don't fit perfectly into an arts faculty.

Vinay also admitted that "as soon as you split you have a tendency to build a Chinese wall. I've had that experience before." If separate faculties are created, he said, ways must be found to stop them from becoming isolated from each other.

The Jennings report recommended consolidation of the departments of French, language and literature, Hispanic and Italian studies, and Slavonic and Oriental studies into one department of modern languages.

A report on academic development, released in December, also recommended this.

"I think myself that it's totally unworkable and potentially dangerous," Greene, who is in the French department, said of the idea.

"There's a possibility of real reduction of quality (of instruction)," he said. With one modern languages department, budget reasons might persuade one faculty member to teach two or three languages, he said.

And the savings of having one department would be "pretty marginal," Greene said.

Vinay said he thought a consolidation of the language departments might be expected, but perhaps to two or three departments instead of one.

On the rest of the report, Greene said: "An awful lot of these recommendations are really minor revisions to existing policy."

Those recommendations that were new, such as creation of a dean of inter-faculty affairs, he said, he wasn't convinced should be tried.

The faculty association is studying both this report and the report on academic development and will make its own recommendations later this spring, said Greene.

A new water main system for the "dry" end of Saanich Peninsula will be considered by representatives of water districts north of Elk Lake.

Following a preliminary meeting earlier this week, called at the suggestion of Saanich MLA Hugh Curtis, it was expected a peninsula water liaison committee would be formed to identify and analyse problems in detail.

This committee is expected to meet in about four weeks.

Saanich Eyes New Water Mains

Curtis said he called representatives of all jurisdictions and water districts north of Elk Lake to discuss what he called "obviously a water problem on the peninsula—both short and long term."

It seemed that as MLA I had the right kind of objectivity that would permit me to call the meeting.

Curtis, who also is mayor of Saanich, said the discussion had nothing to do with the municipality, which is served by Greater Victoria Water District up to Elk Lake.

The municipalities and districts north of Elk Lake and the Saanich municipal boundary are served by a variety of water systems including wells, reservoirs and Elk Lake itself.

The areas include Brentwood, Central Saanich, North Saanich, Deep Cove, Sidney and Piers Island.

GVWD commissioner Ron

Upward attended as an observer.

His district at present is engaged in a long-term main extension program at a capital cost of $2 million a year, with this year's portion going into 48-inch pipe from Langford to Portage Inlet.

By 1977 it is expected the line will have reached Elk Lake via Holland, Wilkinson and Patricia Bay Highway.

Curtis said the next meeting would talk about attitudes, the current status of water systems and long-term goals.

Nub of the problem is the pressure of population growth northward on the peninsula and the fact that well-based water systems are nearing the limit of their ability to supply. There is also the relative cost of new installations and of abandoning existing systems prematurely.

B.C. Snow Removal Costs Soar Past $6 Million Mark

Exceptionally severe weather last winter, with some of the heaviest snowfalls on record, stuck highway maintenance crews in a deep drift of problems and sent snow removal costs soaring to $6.8 million.

That was $1.6 million higher than the previous record snow removal bill of $5.2 million for the 1970-71 winter.

The annual report of the provincial highways department for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1972, tabled Thursday in the legislature, shows the hardest-hit area of the Terrace highway district.

There, the cost of keeping open—or attempting to keep open—735 miles of highway came to $462,821, which was $286,000 higher than the previous winter.

By contrast, on balmy Vancouver Island the cost of snow removal on 810 miles of roads in the Saanich highway district totalled a modest $148,318, an increase of only $27,000 on the bill for the 1970-71.

The report says traffic volumes on provincial highways rose by between five and 10 per cent, while there was a more marked traffic increase of 14 per cent on B.C. Ferries services.

Highway construction increased by 21 per cent and bridge construction by 60 per cent, the report says.

There are 27,194 miles of provincial highways, of which 3,384 are classed as trunk highways and 1,852 as main highways.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A man who had five stolen diamond rings worth more than $1,500 on him when stopped by police was given a suspended sentence and placed on two years' probation in provincial court Thursday by Judge William Ostler.

Ian Forrest Brighton, 33, of 3-1266 Johnson, dropped the jewelry, concealed in a cigarette case, when checked by police in an apartment at 1621 Fernwood on Aug. 16.

Brighton told police he had been given the rings on the previous night by a friend. He was to sell them to buy heroin.

Police checks later revealed that the rings had been stolen, three of them from a West Saanich home and one from a woman in Metchesin. The origin of the fifth ring has not yet been established.

The man had been found guilty of possession of stolen property over $200 Jan. 3.

A man who pleaded guilty to seven counts of indecent exposure was given a suspended sentence and placed on one year's probation by Judge Edmond St. Jorre.

Stephen William George, 27, of 303-3244 Quadra, pleaded guilty Jan. 11 to the offences, which occurred from August to December, 1972. A condition of George's probation is that he have psychiatric assistance.

Jean Yves Leduc, 19, of 649 Admirals, who stole a $15 sweater from Woolco Dec. 9, was fined $250 by Ostler.

Stewart Ian Triplett, 17, of 2838 Ronald Road, was given a suspended sentence and placed on six months' probation, after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana.

In traffic court, Allan Rodstrom, 43, of 1617 McHattie, was fined $350 by Judge Harold Alder for impaired driving Dec. 24.

Louis Matron, 45, of Vancouver, was fined a total of $550 when found guilty of impaired driving and refusing to take a breath-alcohol test June 28, 1972.

Alder fined the man $350 on the impaired count, and $200 for refusing the test.

Takeovers Set

GEORGETOWN (AP) Ptolemy Reid, deputy prime minister and minister of national development and agriculture in Guyana, announced Monday the Guyanese government would take over all sugar estate lands which have not so far been used in the national interest. The British-owned Bookers group has many estates along east coast and some of these have been taken over recently by squatters claiming they need them for housing.

North Viets Label Peace Pact Victory

By MURRAY MARDER
Washington Post
HANOI — North Vietnam is treating its initial cease-fire accord with the United States as the "victorious" end to 100 years of western intrusion into Vietnam, if its terms are carried out.

The Hanoi leadership maintains that it will "strictly implement the agreements" and insists that "the other side" must do the same. This is a planned attempt to accentuate the positive, officials acknowledged, and to project the view that the accord which will be signed Saturday in Paris should produce "peace" and not merely a transient or perforated cease-fire.

This position is clearly intended also to put North Vietnam in the position of the innocent or aggrieved party if the cease-fire is violated, with the United States and the Saigon government taking the responsibility for any default.

From the hour that Premier Pham Van Dong announced the initial accord, it has been characterized by Vietnamese officials as a landmark of the road to complete Vietnamese independence. Vietnamese relish historic comparisons and one official said the new accord promises that "after 30 years (since 1939), the sound of guns will be stopped," that "western aggression" which began "in 1859 will end" and "our dream through 1,000 years of history" may now be fulfilled.

This language by a leading official publicist, Luu Quy Ky, is in the spirit of exhortation and expectation that Communist-ruled North Vietnam cultivates. It is a very special brand of acute nationalism mixed with Marxism-Leninism developed by the late president Ho Chi Minh, the founding father of the present style of rule in North Vietnam.

Virtually overnight, the North Vietnamese government has shifted its official public position from great wariness about American in-entions in the Paris talks to an attitude of high satisfaction with the outcome.

There are new specific pledges in the 23-article accord and its accompanying protocols that North Vietnamese officials are counting as gains over the original draft accord that the United States declined to sign in October. One is the agreement that the United States "will remove permanently deactivate or destroy all the mines in the territorial waters, ports, harbors and waterways of North Vietnam."

North Vietnamese officials are drawing no attention to any of their counterbalancing concessions and translations of all the complex documentation is not immediately available here.

Close comparisons of the stalled October terms and the present accord, officials here maintain, will show that the present agreement is unchanged in principle from the October draft, and that new specifics added to it are in accord with the substance of the agreement they were prepared to sign then.

At the same time, the success proclaimed here is by no means intended to wipe out all the wariness or the spirit of struggle which was greatly intensified by the extraordinary 12 days of American bombing of the Hanoi-Haiphong region in December. After a meeting of North Vietnam's central committee Wednesday, Luu Quy Ky told newsmen "we must create a favorable mood for both sides — but if anything goes wrong we will say so."

For the present at least, neither he nor other officials in Hanoi wished to underscore the risks of fierce political struggle in South Vietnam or further bloodshed after the cease-fire goes into force.

"I think that if the Americans will not interfere in South Vietnamese matters," said Ky, "there will not be any fierce battle at all." Implementing the agreement "is not an easy thing. It is certain that we will have some difficulties. But if everyone wants to implement the agreement and achieve national concord, that battle will not happen."

There was considerable interest, and some broad smiles among the throngs of Vietnamese who gathered around loudspeakers to hear the cease-fire announcement. But there was no great mood of elation, or celebration in this war-scarred capital on the streets.

Among Vietnamese questioned by a group of western newsmen, an educated middle-aged woman said, "It's funny, its surprising. We are no longer accustomed to think of having peace. The first thing I think of is my son at the front — he will be returning soon."

A worker, 24, said he was enthusiastic about the news, "very happy."

But a woman radio journalist said, "well, it is still not completely peace because the struggle must continue until reunification."

Many others said their thought about the prospect of peace are considerably qualified by the realization of the vast amount of destruction across their country and the toll of lives. That toll, many western observers here suspect, will only begin to register deeply when the population becomes aware of who comes home from the war-front in the south and who fails to return. The costs are expected to be extremely heavy which may well account for the present strong official emphasis on the long range historical success achieved by the war sacrifices.

Small Enrolment Increase Recorded While B.C. School Costs Climb 7%

Total enrolment in B.C.'s public schools increased by 1.4 per cent from June, 1971, to June, 1972 — the smallest increase in the past 30 years. But total education costs rose by over $41 million — or about seven per cent — from the fiscal year 1970-71 to 1971-72. The figures were contained in the department of education report on public schools in the province, which was tabled Thursday on the opening day of the legislature's spring sitting.

The report said the 1.4 per cent increase in total enrolment figures was the lowest since enrolment actually dropped by 1,229 from June, 1941, to June, 1942.

Total elementary enrolment (kindergarten to Grade 8) dropped by 141 over that same period, which was the first decrease since 1940. Secondary school enrolment was up by 7,818 pupils or 4.1 per cent, the smallest numerical increase in the past six years and the smallest percentage increase since the 3.7 per cent level of 1949-50.

The report said Grade 1 enrolment dropped by over 3,000 to 29,977 from June, 1971, to June, 1972, as a result of a decreasing birth rate which began in 1961.

It forecasts further drops in Grade 1 enrolment for the next two years, which should result in elementary enrolment continuing to decrease until June, 1977.

Despite the lower enrolment rate of growth, however, the report says there is still a demand for new school facilities, because the distribution of pupils in some areas doesn't coincide with the location of schools.

The number of full time teachers, excluding district-employed teachers and supervisors, increased from 21,755 to 22,280, while eight new schools brought the provincial total to 1,515.

In the 1971 calendar year the total operating cost per pupil for the year was $741.

FIRST ROUND WON FOR UIC ADVANCE

OTTAWA (CP) — The government Thursday night won the first round in the battle to keep the unemployment insurance fund from running out of money.

With New Democrat and Social Credit support, it pushed through second reading a bill lifting the ceiling on how much money the government can make available to the unemployment insurance fund. Failure to get it passed by early next month could leave the fund without enough money to make payments to the jobless.

NDP and Social Credit members combined with the government to raise 139 votes against the 92 for the Conservatives.

The vote sent to the House manpower committee for detailed study a bill to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act. The government wishes to remove the $300-million ceiling set by legislation for government contributions to the Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC) for payment of benefits.

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand will start debate today on a bill to extend the partial ban on capital punishment for another five years.

USED FOR PAYMENTS
Debate of the unemployment insurance amendment consumed two days, during which the Conservatives pressed their view that the government wants to remove the ceiling to make legal two governor-general's warrants totalling $454 million issued by the cabinet late last year. The warrants, issued after the previous Parliament was dissolved in August, were used to make payments to unforeseen numbers of people receiving unemployment insurance.

Lincoln Alexander (PC-Hamilton West) said the government was looking for a blank cheque to cover up its inefficiencies.

Erik Nielsen (PC-Yukon) warned that accepting the amendment "means that the government has $454 million w/d, which to woe more parliamentary support from NDP members."

Much of the debate revolved around three intricate amendments framed by the Conservatives to get the bill thrown out of the House. The Speaker ruled all three out of order.

Former manpower minister Bryce Mackasey, who helped originate much of the unemployment insurance legislation, poured fire on the Conservatives Thursday.

Desk-thumpers on the government side of the House underlined his every point as he lambasted the Conservatives for wanting to water down the legislation. DON'T NEED THEM Calling at the top of his voice, with an arm pointing in accusation at the opposition benches, Mr. Mackasey said: "Don't vote for it. We don't need your support; we don't want your support." The uproar subsided after several minutes. Mr. Mackasey confessed he might have made a "bad error in judgment" in not advising the cabinet soon enough before the last Parliament ended that the UIC was running short of money.

The Conservatives charged that cabinet knew full well it would have to exceed the $300-million ceiling but preferred to wait for the dissolution of Parliament to get the money through cabinet order.

Justice Minister Otto Lang said the UIC will run out of money Feb. 4 unless the ceiling is lifted. The Conservatives gave assurance they would not allow the fund to run dry. The NDP indicated support for the government early in the debate.

Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie told the House he expects Canada-United States trade negotiators to resume in a few weeks.

NO DETAILS
The talks will aim at resolving some of the irritants between the two countries, he said. He did not reply directly to a request by Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield for an outline of the irritants.

Communication Minister Gerard Pelletier, also looking to the U.S., said Canada's Anik I telecommunications satellite will extend service to certain U.S. companies. Anik I was launched by Telesat Canada Ltd., which is 60-per cent owned by the Canadian people through the government.

The satellite will bring telephone and television services to Canada's North.

Personal Aid Asked For Aged

OTTAWA (FP) — Senator Hazen Argue calling for an increase in the amount of the old-age pension cheque that may be retained by pensioners in provincial minimum-care institutions. He spoke in the Senate on the subject and Thursday gave notice of his intention to introduce a motion next week in the upper house.

The senator said that "degrading and inhuman" treatment was accorded old-age pensioners in minimum-care institutions because the portion of the old-age pension they are allowed to retain is inadequate in each province amounting to a range of from 50 to 87 cents per day.

School Board Strike

TALKS WILL RESUME TOMORROW BUT IS MANAGEMENT SERIOUS?

Claiming "tremendous public support" for its stand, the Greater Victoria school board is prepared to allow the janitor strike to continue for some time, Board chairman Peter Bunn said Monday night.

Bunn noted the last janitors' strike in North Vancouver two years ago had continued for about a month and he felt the Victoria strike could go at least as long.

Colonist, Jan. 16

Further meetings between the Greater Victoria school board and its striking employees have been set for Jan. 27 but School Board Chairman Peter Bunn has warned there would be very little change in the Board's position.

Bunn said it seemed clear the schools could continue to operate next week as well or better than they had this week and he thought that with another week of cooling-off, the union might modify its position.

A CUPE spokesman said the union is ready to meet with the Board for negotiations Saturday although they are disappointed the Board apparently has no intention of continuing the bargaining process.

"We will be there on Saturday and ready to bargain in good faith, even if the board isn't," he said.

Colonist, Jan. 20

The strike by 268 tradesmen, custodians, matrons and janitors against the Greater Victoria Board of School Trustees is two weeks old today.

Tomorrow, negotiations between the two sides will resume under the supervision of a Government-appointed mediation officer.

While this strike is directed only against management, we recognize there has been a disruption in education because management decided to close certain schools.

Outside intervention at this time in the Victoria School District strike is not necessary, school board chairman Peter Bunn said today.

"It's pretty young at this time," said Bunn who added that he was advised by professional educators that "irreparable damage" to the education of children is not being done.

Evening Times, Jan. 19

Oak Bay MLA Scott Wallace was strongly critical of what he termed the intransigence of the school board in its failure to stick with negotiations and try to reach a settlement.

What he was concerned about he said was "the apparent lack of urgency" on the Board's part and it's seeming willingness to keep the schools disrupted another whole week before even beginning to talk again.

Colonist, Jan. 21

The union's negotiating committee is prepared to bargain in good faith as long as necessary to obtain a collective agreement acceptable to all parties.

If management is prepared to show similar co-operation a satisfactory settlement can be arrived at this weekend.

However, from Board statements in the newspapers, radio and television over the past few days, our members are not convinced the school board management is serious about this set of negotiations.

We hope they prove us wrong.

Police Misusing Bail Reform, Charges Minister

TORONTO (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang says that police, judges and crown attorneys have been misusing the new bail reform law by needlessly allowing criminals to go free. In a telephone interview from Ottawa, the minister replied to charges by Martin Friedland, dean of law at the University of Toronto. The dean questioned whether the police were trying to scuttle the recent Bail Reform Act by being too liberal about freeing people. "We must improve the way police operate within the law," said Lang. The minister said he had recently written provincial attorneys-general and told them that the law's ability to keep people in custody was not being adequately used. "And I drew to their attention the critical need to prosecute — to throw the book at the guy who doesn't show up for his trial after having been released from custody," said Lang. He had heard of instances where suspects were released although the police weren't sure of their true identities. In Toronto, Friedland told a forum sponsored by the university alumni association that in some instances the police were being too liberal. The police in some cases are being more liberal than the drafters of the legislation intended — and I was one of the drafters. Speaking at a seminar on private rights and the public good, he referred to recent cases of suspects charged with additional crimes while out on bail and said none of them needed to happen. "In all these cases, there was ample justification for refusing bail. One wonders if in fact the police aren't applying the law in such a way as to make it appear unworkable."

Smokin' Joe's Fall Last Straw for Philly

Ralph Bernstein has been reporting on sports in Philadelphia for almost 30 years. That's longer than anybody lasted in the City of Losers since Connie Mack, but the strain is beginning to tell.

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Confessions of a losing sports writer, Joe Frazier was the last straw for my town; Philadelphia the city of losers, has nothing. The only winner in town is the guy who moves. Writers covering the Philadelphia sports beat hold the National Collegiate Athletic Association, National Football League, National Basketball Association and National League records for covering losers. My fingers freeze at the typewriter when the home team wins. The only thing the City of Brotherly Love leads in is firings. Philadelphia Phillies last won a pennant in 1950, the Eagles in 1960, the '76ers in 1967, and then they traded and bungled their way to becoming the laughing stock of pro basketball. The National Hockey League Flyers have never won a title, and were bounced in the first round the two times they stumbled into the playoffs. The Blazers (World Hockey Association) are new, but in the Philadelphia tradition—last. The town even blew the bi-centennial celebrations for 1976, and the country was born here. Everywhere you travel, sports fans make jokes about Philadelphia sports teams: "The '76ers played the Milwaukee Bucks and all the Bucks fouled out in the first quarter. Philadelphia won in two overtimes." The one thing we had was Frazier, the heavyweight champion of the world. He was the city's pride and joy. Then it happened, Smokin'

Joe had his flame extinguished by George Foreman. Each of those six times Joe went down, the statue of William Penn atop city hall shuddered and groaned. Move over Phillies, '76ers, Eagles, Blazers. The city has another sports casualty.

The problem is that the losing syndrome appears to have rubbed off on my private life. For example, my youngest son is the star of his junior high school basketball team. It hasn't won a game. He's barred the proud father from even being a spectator.

This ruboff even has affected my writing: —Book on former pitcher Bobby Shantz. He broke his wrist, never had another good season. —The Phillies of 1964 led the pennant race by 6½ games with 12 left. I signed to write a book on ace pitcher Jim Bunning. Team lost next 10 and blew the flag. —Suggested an article to (Phillies pitcher) Curt Simmons. Next day he sliced off a toe with his power mower. —Suggested a book to Robin Roberts (another Phillies pitcher). He never had another winning season.

—Wrote an article on Eagles coach Jerry Williams. He was fired a week later. The last 10 days have produced a succession of typical Philadelphia stories. Derek Sanderson was given $1 million to leave town by the Blazers of the WHA; the Phillies handed Steve Carlton $165,000 to remain. Roy Rubin got fired because he couldn't make the worst team in pro basketball a winner; they gave Kevin Loughery, a guy who has never coached a minute in his life, a 2½-year contract to guide the '76ers. And the losing goes on.

Sailing: An Executive At Work for His Support

When Air Canada this week named Joe Kryczka of Calgary, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, as "executive of the year in amateur sport," there was a Victorian nominated who qualified for the same honor.

Dick Sharpe, 49, was among the three finalists, and the former boy seaman is now president elect of the Canadian Yachting Association, and obviously No. 1 in Canada's sailing plans for the 1976 Summer Olympics.

And 1976 will make it 20 years as a yachting executive of one type or another for Sharpe, an electrical draftsman at the dockyard in CFB Esquimalt.

"Yes, it was in 1956 that I got suckered in," he reminisced, "competing and doing something for the club going hand in hand." That's when he was asked and agreed, to organize and run the club's annual regatta at Esquimalt.

Since then, organizational type sailing has been a constant way of life for Sharpe, especially in the manner of making the sport available to many who otherwise would not have the opportunity.

He was instrumental in the planning and organization of the first mobile sail training schools in the province, and it happened, in Dick's words, like this:

"How does your sport broaden its base? You simply go out and preach."

Throw Some Boats in a Box . . .

"The main idea was participation — get as many people interested as possible — throw a bunch of boats in a box — and away you go." Last year there were two units which traversed two areas of the province, each unit with an instructor, a van and five dinghies. This year a third unit will be added.

The program caters to all ages. "at Fraser Lake, there was a man 65 years of age who took part. Children, from age 10, if they can swim, and have their parents' consent, are welcome, too."

"We pick up assistant instructors along the way," Sharpe explained, "and we like to think we leave behind a nucleus of active, little sailors, who in turn can help out another time."

Caution is a keyword. "We have to be very conscious of water safety. What do you teach people? This is an aquatic sport. And we have to impress upon them that it is wet, cold, and can kill you."

"A hefty portion of our program is devoted to water practices, and water safety alone," he stressed.

"We couldn't do it without the cooperation of the Community Recreation Branch," he explained. "They have assisted us enormously, are the logical people to help us set up the schools, have local knowledge, and their help is invaluable, especially in the advance planning. The original funding came from the department of Physical Fitness and Amateur Sport."

The Ultimate—A Pacific Centre

This is the fourth year of the mobile schools, and the ultimate for Dick will be when some of the trainees from other parts of the province can get the opportunity to come to the coast for say, two weeks, and get further training.

"In five days, we can only give so much. On the coast the sailor could get individual training, could crew on bigger boats, and we could teach him far more."

If that's in the future, a start may be in the offing. With the Jericho area having been returned to Vancouver, that city already has been made aware of the proposals for sail training.

"We would like to have a Pacific Sail Training Centre there," Sharpe said.

"It is really the only place in Canada where training can be conducted on a year-round basis; sailors could come here from other (iced-in) parts of the country, and besides, it would provide an instructional facility of the highest, for the people of Vancouver."

On a smaller scale, Sharpe would be willing to accept (the government willing) "a small chunk of Royal Roads."

For most, the Olympics are still three years away. But for Sharpe and his committee they are dead ahead.

"We have to have the facility at Kingston ready by 1975," he emphasized. "It will be almost a pre-Olympics we will hold there."

But more about that later. It was easy to see this executive had work to do. For sport.

Slumping Bruins Bow To Revived Red Wings

By Canadian Press

The Red Wings were still flying and the Sabres sharpened up after a dull start in National Hockey League action Thursday night.

Detroit, all but counted out of the post-season games as early as mid-December, continued their bid to overtake Buffalo's Sabres by stopping the faltering Boston Bruins.

The Sabres kept their four-point margin in the battle for fourth in the East, however, by overcoming a 2-0 deficit to hand Minnesota North Stars 5-2.

The results left Buffalo in fourth, five points behind Boston and four ahead of Detroit.

In the only other game, Philadelphia Flyers moved into third in the West by stopping Pittsburgh 6-3, leaving the Penguins in a challenging position two points behind Los Angeles Kings and Atlanta Flames and three back of the Flyers.

The Wings, who stormed into the early lead with their fastest start in history, just as suddenly grounded and there was apparent dissonance in the camp over coach Johnny Wilson's training program—devised by Toronto physical-fitness expert Lloyd Percival.

The Wings suddenly discovered themselves 12 points behind Buffalo and with the playoff picture becoming increasingly hazy even before the midway mark.

Wilson had words with spirited little Marcel Dionne, the record-setting rookie of last year, and the centre was suspended.

Perhaps Detroit management saw the light, the Wings' training program was cut back and the club finally started hitting the stride that featured its late-season bid for a playoff berth last year that just fell short.

Henry Boucha, the ex-Olympian ace of the U.S. team, scored twice to lead his teammates at Boston on offence and the rugged Detroit defence threw up a blanket in front of goaltender Denis DeJordy that limited Bruins to just 29 shots.

The Wings hammered Boston rookie John Adams with 41 shots, including Red Berenson's seventh goal of the year that broke up a 2-2 struggle.

Eighty shots were fired in the game at Philadelphia, 42 of them by the Penguins.

Cooke's Pot Down Drain

NEW YORK (CP) — It took new, heavyweight champion George Foreman a little more than four minutes to kill the long-stalled plans of California millionaire Jack Kent Cooke to promote the richest boxing match in history.

For almost two years, the smart-money boys stalled over signing up a second Joe Frazier-Muhammad Ali title match, a natural that could have grossed $15 to $20 million.

But Foreman knocked out Frazier in two rounds Monday night in Kingston, Jamaica.

Today, Ali's no longer interested in Frazier, saying: "He's second-hand."

Frazier not only lost his title but also a chance to earn as much as $3 million in a return match with Ali. He and Ali each earned about $2.5 million in March, 1971, when Frazier stopped Ali in the 15th round.

Foreman says he'll rest a while until "the bread runs out" before thinking about another fight. Meanwhile, Ali continues to fight regularly and next meets Joe Bugner of Britain in Las Vegas, Nev., on Feb. 14.

Ali can barnstorm around the world, and make good money, but Foreman is still not the box-office attraction Ali is.

But the publicity a heavyweight champion generates can change that for Foreman in the next year or so.

Meanwhile, Cooke is left with a piece of paper giving him the rights to the return Frazier-Ali fight.

Before Foreman ended it all, Cooke was reported willing to let the match leave California to meet objections of the Frazier camp.

But Frazier went wrong as Foreman bombed him to the canvas six times.

Joe wasn't smoking, and after he hit the canvas the third time, Ali's trainer, Angelo Dundee, moaned: "I told you so, there goes $15 million down the drain."

Jets' Owner Wants Patty

Times News Services

Can Winnipeg offer Patty Ginnell more than he can find in Flin Flon?

A Winnipeg newspaper Thursday speculated about the possibility.

The tribune reported that Ginnell, coach and general manager of Flin Flon Bombers of the Western Canada Junior Hockey League may move to the Jets in the same capacity with a part ownership as well.

Poor attendance has plagued the junior Jets this season and Ben Hatskin, owner of the club as well as the professional Jets of the World Hockey Association, is reported ready to sell the junior club. There was also speculation the team would be moved to a different city.

Hatskin said Ginnell would "make a good coach anywhere."

He said he would wait for a month before anything definite is done, but conceded "there's going to be action."

Ginnell would not commit himself.

"There's only one way I would leave Flin Flon. I would have to be guaranteed part or complete ownership of the team in the city I'd move to."

The Jets, with the second poorest record in the 12-team league, improved their record Thursday at the expense of Vancouver Nats, the team with the worst record. Playing before only 733 fans in Vancouver, the Jets defeated Vancouver 6-2 to record only their 10th victory.

In Thursday's only other game, Saskatoon Blades came through with a pair of third-period goals to salvage a 2-2 draw with Brandon Wheat Kings.

Capitanos Surprise

VANCOUVER — Vancouver Capitanos, last-place finishers in the four-team Dogwood Basketball Association, opened the playoff final with a victory Thursday night.

Capitanos downed Surrey Bronco's 75-68 in the opener of a series which will also determine an opponent for Victoria Scorpions Men's. Wear in the B.C. senior "A" men's basketball championship next month.

Howie Knapf scored 18 points to pace Capitanos, upset winners over Leagues champion Richmond Ramblers in the two-game, total point semi-finals.

The best-of-three provincial finals are scheduled to start Feb. 17 in Victoria.

Woman in Winning Car For First Time in Rally

MONTE CARLO (Reuters-AP) — Frenchman Jean-Claude Andrieu and his girl co-driver, Michele Petit, won the 42nd Monte Carlo rally today in an Alpine Renault, according to unofficial calculations.

Alpine made a clean sweep of the first three places as they did in 1971 with Sweden's Ove Andersson and Frenchman Jean Todt taking second place and the French pair of Jean Pierre Nicolas and Guy Vial finishing third.

Only 47 of the original 279 starters from the nine European starting points completed the final run into the Mediterranean principally early this morning.

Andrieu was provisional winner by just 26 seconds over Andersson, who led a performance which reflected the sadly anti-climatic quality of the national squad's record over the last few years.

The latest England disappointment was a dismal showing against Wales, a lacklustre 1-1 result which prompted some experts to predict that England may not even qualify for the next World Cup playoffs.

"This shabby show," lamented one London headline Thursday in summing up what was also condemned as a "tawdry" draw against Wales.

England's manager since 1963, Ramsey had to be content with an also-ran finish in the 1970 Cup competition — a performance which reflected the sadly anti-climatic quality of the national squad's record over the last few years.

Windy, Rainy Weather Dampen Fishing Action

Blustery wind and heavy rain put the damper on most salmon and steelhead fishing activity around Vancouver Island during the past week.

But, as always, some success was noted. The odd spring up to 10 pounds has been caught in Saanich Inlet, near Misery Bay, Stone House and Tod Inlet white jacks up to seven pounds were landed between Bamerton and Sheppard Point.

Spring up to 22 pounds have been landed off Fiddle Reef by fishermen using strip, 60 to 65 feet of line and 1½ pounds of weight.

Other spots that might be worth a try this weekend are Pedder Bay (along the kelp with strip, eight ounces of weight and 60 feet of line) or just off Whiffen Spit in Sooke (with spoons or strip, two to four ounces of weight and 50 to 60 feet of line).

Best spots further up-Island have been near the Government wharf in Cowichan Bay (with white hootchie-kootchies), off Nanaimo, in Union Bay and in Duncan Bay. Steelheaders will have to play things by ear this weekend as most of the Island rivers are high and dirty following the recent rains.

Freezing temperatures Wednesday night started stream levels on the downward path but most won't be low enough to be fishable by the weekend.

However, the Cowichan, Koksilah, Nanaimo, Campbell, Gold and Salmon rivers just might be worth a try.

NIBBLES: Anyone interested in "four-wheeling" is invited to a meeting intended to reorganize the Victoria Four Wheel Drive Club at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Salon "A" of the Ingham Hotel.

Dave Mycock won the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association's trophy for the heaviest deer of the year (161 pounds) at the club's recent annual meeting. . . . Mike Hodding collected the trophy for the archer bagging the biggest buck, a 144-pounder. . . . Bob Kennedy won the Boone and Crockett trophy for the buck with the highest scoring antlers. . . . His 148-pounder scored 112½ points.

Al Meadows, one of the Amalgamated Conservation Society delegates who attended the meeting with federal fisheries officials last week, brought up a good point. . . . Sometimes it doesn't take much to improve a salmon stream.

"For instance, take Millstream," said Al. "It's had fish ladders that were of wooden construction in the past, that were proven to work. Why don't we, with a little help from you (federal fisheries), go in and put those wooden ladders back in and try to build the Millstream run back to its former production?"

Maybe some of the smaller streams around the coast don't boast tremendous salmon runs, but collectively they must carry a little weight.

U.S. Skier Wins Slalom

CHAMONIX, France (AP) — Marilyn Cochran collected the first United States victory of the 1972-73 World Cup ski season today with a clear triumph in the Kandahar special slalom.

The 22-year-old skier from Richmond, Vt., beat out Rosi Mittermaier by .59 of a second.

Miss Cochran's total was 90.14 from heats of 45.16 and 44.98.

Miss Mittermaier, of West Germany, had times of 45.40 and 45.33 for 90.73. Monika Kaserer of Austria finished third in 92.36.

Casper's Fortunes Change

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Billy Casper surveyed the wreckage of his dismal, frustrating 1972 season and spoke in characteristic fashion.

"Everything was on a downward ebb," he said. "I was playing badly," swinging badly, thinking badly. But it will probably make me a better individual.

"Now everything is on the upswing."

The 41-year-old Casper, who suffered the poorest season of his brilliant career last year, had just slogged slowly through rain and mud and wind to a 66 and the first round lead Thursday in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am golf tournament, offering $205,000 in total prize money.

"I was very surprised," said Casper. "I didn't expect to play this well at all."

He had a two-stroke lead over Tom Weiskopf after his six-under-par effort.

Two Canadians were well-back of the leaders. Toronto's George Knudson checked in with a 73 and Ben Kern, also of Toronto, a 77.

Weiskopf at 68, was followed by veteran Don Mac-sengale, alone at 69. The group at 70, two under par, were big Bobby Nichols, Hubert Green and Bob Eastwood.

All the leaders were at Cypress Point, one of three Monterey Peninsula courses being played under the format for this event. It's generally considered to be the easiest of the three and is the most sheltered from the weather.

Jack Nicklaus, who won this tournament and the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach last year, could do no better than a rain-interrupted 71, one of more than a dozen at that figure.

Arnold Palmer matched par 72 at Cypress. British Open champ Lee Trevino, who has a notorious dislike for cold, wet weather, went to 74, at Spayglass Hill. Australian Bruce Crampton, winner of the last two tour events who has a chance to become the first man in more than a decade to win three in a row, blew to a 77 at Pebble Beach.

"We Australians aren't very good at water polo," he said.

International Regime for High Seas

Jeremy Hewett, long-time sailor in these parts, and others, hopes to make New York this year for a United Nations gathering that could be the beginning of the end to freedom of the high seas.

Those of us who know him well, credit him with the organization of the Citizens of the Sea, now 500 strong, which uses a certain amount of bluffery to hide a real concern about what's happening to our marine environment.

AROUND OUR SHORES

going to dole out exploration rights and such things as mining, fishing and whaling permits. Because it's the UN, the whole business will have a legal flavor when, in actual fact, it could end up in a great big rip-off. He says this is probable because the jurisdiction will be sponsored by the UN: "It just won't have enough teeth in it because the big powers will only go along with it as long as it suits them," he asserts. He's been informed that non-governmental agencies will be allowed to attend and given consultative status.

teeth in it because the big powers will only go along with it as long as it suits them," he asserts.

After being badly trounced the week before, last Sunday's team racing, sailed by the same crews, lifted them from the cellar to cock-of-the-walk status. Their team won all five races in 42s, their El Toro sailors also cleaned up: the A team placing first in all six sailouts, and the B team losing only one of their six races.

There's Gold in Potatoes —For Miami Con Men

MIAMI (UPI) — Haberdasher Abraham Schmit told police Thursday he was conned into investing his life's savings of $12,000 in a stack of potatoes.

Two con men walked into Schmit's men's shop in downtown Miami Monday. One of the men, posing as a sailor aboard a Russian ship supposedly docked in Miami, displayed several gold coins while paying for his purchase. Schmit asked about the coins.

The second suspect joined the conversation and the "sailor" said he had a large quantity of the coins aboard his ship, but would need the ship captain's permission to sell them.

Schmit and the second con man, who posed as a "jeweler," managed to talk the sailor into selling them one of the coins for $12. They also persuaded the sailor to ask the captain about selling all the coins and return with an answer on Tuesday.

Schmit agreed to invest $12,000 and the bogus jeweler said he would put up $21,000.

The three men met again Tuesday in Schmit's shop. The jeweler handed the sailor a bundle he said contained his $21,000. Schmit handed over his $12,000 and the sailor handed over a small locked suitcase that he said contained part of the coins.

The sailor said the rest of the coins were on the ship and the jeweler agreed to help haul the rest of the coins back from the ship. About an hour later, they called Schmit, said they were still counting the coins and would be there soon.

The men, of course, never returned and Schmit hopefully pried open the suitcase, found the potatoes and reluctantly called police.

"I came here without a penny," said Schmit, 69, a Russian immigrant. "It was all the money I had... all I had worked for for seven years."

Gray's View: Lock 'Em Up

WASHINGTON (WP) — Acting FBI Director Patrick Gray called on criminal justice experts Thursday to put more stress on incarceration and less on rehabilitation of lawbreakers.

In a speech to the federally sponsored national conference on criminal justice, Gray said rehabilitation efforts should be recognized as useful for some offenders but "a useless gesture" and a public danger for many hardened criminals.

"The real purpose of incarceration is to protect society," Gray said. "If rehabilitation works, let's rehabilitate. If not, let's incarcerate and protect society," he added.

FRENCH JAIL B.C. FARMER people

BIARRITZ, France — Richard Bowman, a farmer from New Denver, B.C., was sentenced Thursday to five years in jail and a fine of $121,600, for attempting to smuggle 308 pounds of hashish into France concealed in a false gas tank of his car.

Bowman, a native of Stranton, Pa., told the court that Americans, whom he refused to name, approached him in New Denver last year and asked him to convey the hashish to the United States from Morocco. He bought a new car in Germany which was set up by an American in Casablanca with false compartments made in the U.S. to exactly resemble the original.

He took delivery of the hashish in Ketama, Morocco, and was caught at the Spanish-French border.

The car was confiscated. Bowman also was forbidden to enter French territory after he completes his prison term.

ATLANTA — Federal Judge Newell Edenfield ordered two high ranking U.S. prison officials Wednesday to allow inmates to practise a new religion they call "The Church of The New Song."

Edenfield's order held Norman Carlson, director of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons, and the bureau's chaplain, Frederick Silber, in contempt for refusing to recognize the religion.

Edenfield directed that all 30 federal prisons comply with the order. Prison officials said the religious sect, founded by prisoner Harry W. Thierault at Latuna, Tex., was a fraud supported only by the most hardened prisoners.

MOSCOW, Idaho — Will Olesen has a home where the buffalo roam — but he'd like his three wandering buffalo back.

Olesen has a herd of six buffalo which he raises for food and sale on his ranch. Three of them have disappeared. The beasts, which weigh about a ton apiece, are worth between $400 and $700 each.

MOSS POINT, Miss. — Police said that a high school student apparently angered because he was sent home for being tardy, returned to school with a .22-calibre pistol and wounded his teacher.

The boy, Robert Lewis Payne, Jr., 17, probably will be charged with assault with intent to murder, officers said. Robert Ward, 40, the teacher, was hospitalized in satisfactory condition with a bullet wound in the abdomen.

ONASSIS RITES

ATHENS (AP) — Hundreds of black-clad mourners filed through the rain-swept Athens cemetery to the Chapel of St. Lazarus Thursday to pay their respects to Alexandros Onassis.

The 24-year-old Alexandros, only son of shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis, died Tuesday night of injuries suffered in a plane crash Monday.

Visitors to the chapel included relatives, friends, employees of the Onassis-owned Olympic Airways and curious onlookers. The largest wreath was sent by King Constantine, the Greek monarch who has lived in self-exile in Rome since 1967.

One of the earliest visitors was Fiona Von Thyssen, 38, a former girlfriend of Alexandros who had remained by him most of the time during his fight for life in the hospital.

The former British model knelt and placed her head upon the coffin for 10 minutes, tears streaming down her cheeks.

Tina Niarchos, Alexandros's mother, wept throughout her visit.

Ruling Promotes Master-Servant Idea: Young

Campbell River high school principal John Young says he's sure the Supreme Court will reverse the board of reference decision which upheld his firing last August.

"The decision goes against all concepts of fair play," Young told more than 300 University of Victoria students Thursday.

Describing his hearing as a "Kafka-like trial," Young said much of the legal argument used against him in the board's majority decision released earlier this month, was based on the master-servant relationship between school boards and teachers.

Students laughed and clapped as Young read to them sections of the decision which said he should have resigned and then taken the "more legitimate course" of criticizing the system from outside.

He quoted legal arguments used by the prosecution which included a case in 1886 where a servant was not allowed to criticize his master and a case in 1936 where a meter reader was allowed to be fired for criticizing the placement of meters.

Young called the misconduct charge "absurd" but said he was glad to be cleared of a neglect of duty charge "which was more serious and would be inexcusable if true."

The dismissed principal told students, who were mostly from the education faculty, that he had "no intention of abandoning education."

"It's likely I will have some other role in B.C. education," he said.

The Campbell River school board, which originally fired Young, has changed its make-up since the last municipal elections and last week recommended the minister of education hire Young as one of her advisors. Young said history will look on this period in time as one of "very intense and widespread social change" and schools must follow suit.

"We've been more involved with the methods of education instead of the subject," he said. "It's what you want to teach that's most important not how you want to teach."

"There's massive boredom, disinterest and apathy in schools because the curriculum hasn't changed to meet the changing needs of society."

Young said he recognized the authority of school boards and the department of education but felt that reasonable teachers across the province want to have some say in curriculum.

Educational decision should be made, he said, through the co-operation of parents, students, teachers and school boards.

Young plans to appeal the decision of the three-man board of reference to the B.C. Supreme Court, probably during the summer.

The board held a 10-day hearing in December before upholding, in a 2-to-1 decision, the firing of Young.

GRANNY-NAPPER NABBED

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (UPI) — A 67-year-old grandmother held captive by a kidnapper all day in the woods near the Canadian border was rescued unharmed Thursday.

Mrs. Varian Hillyard, the wife of a Bellingham businessman, said she answered the doorbell to find a long-haired man armed with a pistol. He wore a stocking over his face.

The intruder told her to sit down on aavenport in the living room, where he announced: "Well, Mrs. Hillyard, this is an official kidnapping."

The man telephoned Mrs. Hillyard's husband, Reg, and told him he wanted $15,000 ransom.

He then ordered the woman into her white Cadillac and told her to drive to a wooded area near Sumas, just south of the U.S.-Canadian border.

Hillyard, in the meantime, called authorities who found the empty Cadillac and staked it out.

The husband delivered the ransom to the wooded spot and the three of them departed — Hillyard in his own car, Mrs. Hillyard and the kidnapper in the Cadillac.

A short distance away the cars were stopped by a police roadblock and the kidnapper was apprehended without incident.

The suspect was identified as Paul Blaine Dalton, 23, Bellingham.

"He talked about the trees and he was worried about the country turning into cement," Mrs. Hillyard recalled of her day in the woods. "He also talked about his father, mother and brother being blown up in a car in Chicago."

35 Years on Fire Trucks Enough, Says Alf Perry

By BRUCE OBEY
Times Staff

After 35 years as a Victoria fireman, Assistant Chief Alf Perry, 58, has decided to pack it in.

At 8 a.m. Saturday, Perry will pass the portals at No. 1 fire hall for the last time.

"I've served long enough. It gets to you when you have to jump out of bed at 2 or 3 in the morning."

"I've served my time and it's come to an end. I have no regrets," he said.

Why is he leaving two years before reaching the compulsory retirement age of 60?

"We've had a couple of fellows go off the department and only last a couple of years," he said.

That's why. He also wants to hit a few hot fishing spots in his fully-equipped camper — after a month in Hawaii.

Perry believes firefighting "shortens your life."

In his time, Victoria fire department has suffered only one accidental death.

"But we've had people drop dead from heart attacks while at fires," he said.

"It's a young man's job. When I was first on this job we never had much safety equipment. A young fellow coming into the department has the equipment right at his hands," said Perry.

A few other things have changed since Perry became a probationer at the age of 22. His starting wage was $88 a month. Nowadays a new man begins at $627.

Today, the department accepts no-one with less than grade 12 education. When Perry signed up there was no minimum educational requirement — but you had to be big and strong.

During 35 years of service, Perry has never been seriously injured in the course of his duties.

"I've been cut up a couple of times," he said.

"Years ago" at the Cameron Mills fire, now part of B.C. Forest Products, he had a pretty close shave.

"The upper floors gave way and all the heavy machinery came down beside us," he said.

Another time he had a complete shave — all his hair was burned off.

"That's why I've had to wear a crew-cut for the last 30 years," he joked.

Checking to ensure that nobody was listening through walls, he said, "I'm going to let it grow a little now."

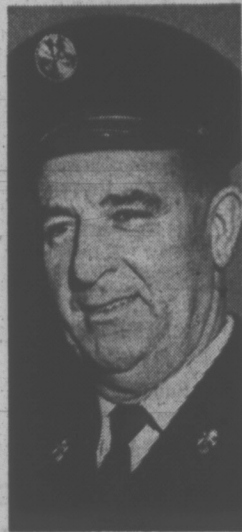

"But not as long as yours," he added.

Perry isn't the only long-time City of Victoria employee in his family — his father Sydney Thomas, was with the city's water works department for 32 years and his brother John, 54, has been with Victoria police for 31 years.

"The three of us together have put in about 100 years with the city," he said.

His 29-year-old son, Brian, is now a Saanich policeman.

Perry joined the department April 1, 1938. On May 1, 1960, he was promoted to lieutenant. He became a captain April 1, 1966, and his final position of assistant chief was assumed April 1, 1970.

PERRY
going fishing

During his career he completed a 13-month course on various aspects of fire prevention, fighting and safety and received a certificate from the Municipal Manager's Association on Fire Administration.

"We're going to miss him," said Chief Eric Simmons, "You're missing 35 years of experience and you can't buy that. He's been very loyal and has done a good job on our behalf."

Longer Strikes Blamed For Record Lost Time

The labor department reported Thursday that the number of man-days lost in 1972 as a result of labor disputes was the highest ever recorded in the province.

A total of 2,120,848 man-days were lost, involving more than 106,000 workers, according to figures in the 1972 annual report of the department tabled in the legislature.

Hardest hit were the construction, forestry, manufacturing and public administration areas.

Strike went on for an exceptionally long time in 1972, the labor statistics show. In 1971, the average worker involved in a strike lost 5.3 days of work. In 1972, this figure jumped to 19.1 days.

The labor report, filed in the legislature by Labor Minister Bill King, shows the continuing increase in B.C.'s labor force, largely the result of migration to the province of workers from other parts of Canada.

The labor force climbed 4.2 per cent over 1971 to a total of 949,000 workers. However, employment was only up 3.7 per cent over the year, leaving a substantial portion of the new workers jobless.

As a result, unemployment climbed. The average rate of unemployment in 1972 was 7.5 per cent or 71,000 persons. Hardest hit in terms of age groups was the 14-24 age bracket, which suffered an unemployment rate of 15 per cent.

Population of the province climbed in 1972 to a total of 2,247,000 persons on June 1, up 2.9 per cent over 1971. The national growth rate was only 1.2 per cent for the same period and the B.C. rate of growth over 1970 was 2.2 per cent.

The report said, "In-migration from other provinces accounted for 73 per cent of the growth rate."

Wages and salaries took a hefty step upward in 1972. Remuneration paid to workers increased 10.6 per cent over the year to a total of $5,980 million. The industrial composite wage was set at $161.69.

The labor figures show that the labor force has grown at an annual average rate of 4.8 per cent over the past 10 years, increasing 61.2 per cent overall since 1962.

The ranks of women workers have increased most dramatically during that period, at a rate of 6.9 per cent per year. During the same period, male workers increased only 4.0 per cent per year.

The 25-44 age bracket remains the largest in terms of labor force strength. There are 424,000 workers between 25 and 44 years old, constituting 45 per cent of the labor force.

Fine for Nixon Team Stymies Bugging Case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon's re-election finance committee today acknowledged eight violations of the new campaign spending law — all involving Watergate defendant G. Gordon Liddy — and was fined $8,000, the maximum possible.

The committee's action meant that no details about Liddy's use of $26,500 in campaign funds would be brought out in evidence.

In a two-minute arraignment before U.S. District Judge George Hart, the finance committee to re-elect the president pleaded not guilty to an eight-count "criminal information," filed Jan. 11 by the justice department.

No individuals were charged.

Attorney Kenneth Parkinson offered the committee's plea in court and Walter Barnes, representing the government, opposed in saying it was "contrary to our policy" to accept such a plea.

"I have never been able to see any difference between a plea of nolo contendere and guilty," Hart told Parkinson.

"There may be a face-saving difference, but it is very slight. However, the pleas will be accepted and I will fine the finance committee to re-elect the president $1,000 on each count for a total of $8,000, which is the maximum."

The misdemeanor charges

all involved failure of the committee to receive receipts from Liddy for $26,500 in campaign funds and with failing to file proper reports on that money with the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, as required by the campaign finance law that went into effect last April 7.

Liddy, formerly counsel to the finance committee, is currently on trial on charges of conspiracy, burglary, bugging and wiretapping.

Harold Winch Honored Guest

Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson took time Thursday following the reading of the throne speech to welcome Harold Winch, an old-time politician who spent 20 years in the British Columbia house.

"Having concluded the formal part of my duties, I welcome, on your behalf, a man who, for many years, graced this chamber," the lieutenant-governor said.

Winch, 65, was among the more than 200 guests sitting on the floor of the house during the reading of the throne speech opening the second session of the 30th legislature.

It wasn't the first throne speech Winch had listened to. He heard three dozen or more during the 40 years he was involved in provincial and federal politics.

But the occasion was particularly meaningful because it was only the second time a throne speech has come from a government formed by the New Democratic Party — the party Winch worked for, along with its forerunner, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, for more than 40 years.

In welcoming Winch, Nicholson said:

"I not only express my personal feelings but the gratitude of the premier and all the members of the house."

"Glad to see you looking so well," he told Winch, who has been in failing health for the past two years.

Winch sat in the B.C. house for 20 years from 1933 to 1953, the last 12 of those years as leader of a CCF opposition.

He then sat in the House of Commons as a CCF and NDP member until his retirement from active politics last year.

PM Demands Montreal Guarantees

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau will insist on a guarantee that Canadian taxpayers will not be required to make up any deficit at the conclusion of the Montreal Summer Olympic Games in 1976.

If there is no such guarantee forthcoming Trudeau said Thursday the federal government will not consider allowing Montreal to have a special issue of stamps and coins as part of its plan for financing the Games.

Even with such a guarantee Ottawa would only consider the issuance of such coins and stamps if it was evident that such a plan would win a large degree of all-party support in the House of Commons.

The prime minister is on record as stating that his government will not under any circumstances give special financial aid to the Montreal Olympics.

He has made that clear ever since the Quebec metropolis was awarded the Games. Federal funds that could be made available would have to come out of the federal housing and other programs which are also available to all other Canadian cities.

Thursday in the House, the prime minister made his position very clear.

Finance Minister John Turner and Privy Council President C. M. Drury later went to the prime minister and congratulated him on the direct and blunt description of his government's position.

It followed his declaration to former prime minister John Diefenbaker that the federal government was delaying its reply to Montreal's requests for authority to issue Olympic stamps and coins.

He said, "We might be prepared to consider it sympathetically if it had the support of the other parties."

Romania Cuts Ties

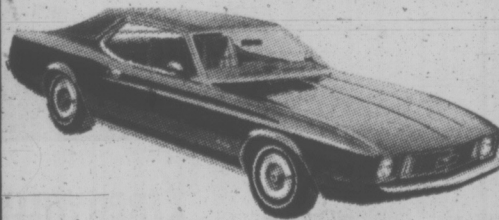

UNITED NATIONS, Reuter, — Canada's refusal to grant customs preferences to Romania, as a developing country, and other obstacles, have caused the ministry of foreign trade in Bucharest to recommend the suspension of imports from Canada "for the time being," informed sources said Thursday.

The sources said Romania was studying the possibility of opening high-level contacts with Canada to try to settle problems which were preventing the improvement of bilateral trade relations.

According to the informants, lower-level Canadian officials, and businessmen, seemed to be ignorant of "the realities in Romania."

Indians Hit Harbor Plan

NANAIMO — The Nanaimo Harbor Commission has been accused of failing to consider the effects of its planned expanded port facilities on local residents and of infringing on aboriginal land rights.

The charges were made at a public hearing of the Canadian Ports and Harbors Planning Committee held here Thursday to consider the commission's expansion plans.

Bob Pederson of the B.C. Wildlife Federation said the three-man Nanaimo Harbor Commission had attempted "to foist on the public a scheme they have hatched in secret and without reference to the people living in Nanaimo who will be most directly affected."

Rev. A. J. Griffin of Nanaimo told the hearing Indian land rights are being over-riden.

"When will white people learn that we have continually taken over aboriginal land with fractional or no compensation?" Griffin said. "Now we're doing it again by extending this port development across in front of the Nanaimo Indian Reserve."

Mrs. Ellen White, spokesman for the South Vancouver Island Tribal Federation, said the group was to the development for the same reasons.

"We are getting tired of being the last to know what is happening to us," she said. "We don't want a waterfront slum area on our land."

Forty-seven individuals and groups presented briefs to the planning committee, most of them expressing opposition to the plan.

The opposition was rebutted by harbor commissioner Doug Greer who said the report of the federal environment department on the proposal may be prejudicial.

He said members of the Fisheries Research Board biological station who had conducted the study had made public statement against the plans.

"I hope the committee will take into consideration the possibility that their attitude of their people might impair their ability to hand down an objective, fair report," Greer said.

Mayor Frank Ney also said he did not feel the report was objective.

Following the hearing, committee chairman Del Taylor said written submission would be accepted for another two weeks and the committee would hand down its recommendations within a month.

Meanwhile the Nanaimo-Duncan and district Labor Council has decided to join the protest movement against locating the expanded port facility on the Nanaimo River estuary.

Hospital Completion To Cost 104 Pct. More

DUNCAN — Taxpayers are facing a 104 per cent increase in costs to complete the last 23 beds in the extended care hospital, Cowichan Valley Regional Board members have been told.

After the $11 million referendum was approved by Cowichan Valley residents a year ago, the Social Credit government would not allow full development of the 100-bed hospital.

At that time the cost to complete the 23 beds would have been $30,000, but now it will cost more than $74,000, directors were advised.

Another referendum will probably be needed to raise the money.

Construction on the hospital is expected to be completed by March.

DUNCAN — A 31-year-old Vancouver man has been charged with attempted robbery.

berry from the Village Green Inn here on Sunday.

William Owen Wheten, who appeared in provincial court, was remanded without plea until Feb. 5.

RCMP said a man approached the desk about 2:20 a.m. and demanded $5,000 but the staff notified police who apprehended him.

DUNCAN — Local radio station CKAY this March will increase power from 1,000 to 5,000 watts.

The station, owned by Ernie Mykyte who also manages the business, has received permission to increase to 5,000 watts during the day but remain at 1,000 at night.

Mykyte is also part owner of the CJYR in Edson, Alta.

Production manager Bruce Payne said the increase will give effective listening for residents from the Malahat to Ladysmith to Lake Cowichan with the station being heard often in Victoria and Nanaimo.

Payne hopes that two attractions will be his morning open line show from 11:05 until noon and a reorganized music format to more contemporary country rather than middle of the road music.

New Wharves For Sidney

New wharves for Sidney at the foot of Beacon Avenue have been promised in a letter to the Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce from the federal public works office in Vancouver.

After a storm last September, the chamber wrote federal authorities protesting the dilapidated condition of the wharves, many of which were wrecked by the high seas.

At the first meeting of 1973, retiring president Bob Whyte reported the public work department's promise to "renew" the faulty structures which are placed beside the permanent wharf for use by summer visitors.

Karel Drost was elected president of the new executive; Jerry Tregaskis, vice-president; Bob Whyte, Len Silver, Ellen Krasniuk, Phil Merrett, John Bukovic, Donna McArthur, Norman McCandlish, John Elliott and Hilary Lewis are directors.

Reporting on the Chamber's efforts since 1968 to obtain a breakwater to shelter Sidney harbor, John Elliott said that a proposal now before municipal council for marina development by private enterprise may be the key to federal help.

If the proposal is satisfactory, said Elliott, the government may match private funds to make the breakwater a reality. Donald Munro, Saanich-Esquimalt MP, is supporting the chamber's efforts, Elliott added.

Alderman Hits Library Takeover

North Saanich Ald. Nell Horth has warned against the possible takeover of the peninsula branch of Vancouver Island Regional Library system by the Greater Victoria Public Library Service.

Excerpts from a report compiled by an Ontario firm at the request of the board and made possible by a $10,000 grant from the provincial Library Development Commission were noted by Ald. Horth at a council meeting this week.

Charging that the report is a "ruse" to bring the southern Vancouver Island branches of VIRL under the Capital Regional District umbrella, Horth added "again we find bureaucracy rearing its ugly head."

The report states that after legal assumption of public library service as a sub-regional function by Capital Regional Board, an assessment on municipalities concerned sufficient to maintain the service "at least at the present level" would be required.

Amounts to be levied from peninsula municipalities based on a two mill assessment at 1972 level are suggested: Central Saanich, $28,673; Sidney, $24,502; North Saanich, $29,330.

A survey of present library costs in these areas shows that Central Saanich, a member of the Victoria board paid $25,000 last year. Sidney and North Saanich, both members of VIRL, paid $11,645 and $15,158 respectively.

- KENWOOD KR 4200. This precision engineered stereo receiver has one ultra sophisticated circuit after another to guarantee ultimate performance and reliability. For example, direct coupled power amp, super low noise pre-amp, hi-sensitivity and low noise front end, double switching demodulator, superior IF stage, linear frequency dial scale, noise filter circuit and much more. But, most important, the KR 4200 is from Kenwood, so you know you can depend on it. 2 years parts and labor honored throughout Canada.

- GARRARD ZERO 100. Music goes on a record at a perfect tangent. Now it comes off at a perfect tangent. For years, zero tracking error has been the elusive goal of the automatic turntable maker. The only automatic turntable with zero tracking error. The test reports have been recorded by experts in their reviews of the ZERO 100. Some of them are saying things about this instrument that have never been said about an automatic turntable before. Complete with deluxe base, cover and SHURE M91E cartridge.

- JMI MACH. III. These 3-way speakers are considered by most to be as good or better than speakers costing up to twice as much. When these speakers are mentioned "presence" is the word that invariably comes up. Why? A 12" woofer, 5" mid-range and 3" dome tweeter delivers all the sounds you never realized were there. KEY WITNESS LIED: NEWSMAN

QUESNEL (CP) — The editor of a weekly newspaper testified Thursday that a key crown witness told him during an interview that he (the witness) had made up evidence given in testimony Wednesday during the murder trial of Charles David Garry Head.

Head, 26, is charged with non-capital murder in the death of seven-year-old Tanya Busch, daughter of B.C. Penitentiary guard Klaus Busch. The youngster was last seen alive in Vancouver June 2. Her body was found in Surrey, 12 days later.

Jon Wilson, editor of the Quesnel Cariboo Observer, told the British Columbia Supreme Court jury that he approached Gerald Scobie at the bus depot Thursday a few hours after Scobie had testified that Head had been involved in numerous fights in the penitentiary with Tanya's father.

Scobie was one of three prisoners or former inmates serving sentences in the penitentiary along with Head a year ago, who were called by the crown to give evidence.

One of the three, Bruce Alan Kaiser, 27, testified that Head hated Busch and that Head had told him he killed the girl.

Wilson testified that Scobie told him that Scobie, Darrell Weed and Bruce Kaiser made up a story "to substantiate the police case because they did feel he was guilty."

Recalled to the stand Scobie repeatedly told the court he could not recall what he had said to Wilson.

Crown prosecutor Lee Skipp said the case rested on one main point — that a little girl, the daughter of a prison guard whom evidence had shown Head hated, was found dead in the most convenient place to the Head house to hide her body.

The trial continues.

Indian Sit-In

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A group of Indians who moved into offices of the Indian affairs department say they will continue their occupation until a new slate of officers is named to lead the Kamloops Indian band. About 20 supporters of chief-elect Norman La Rue spent the night in the department building. The occupation began as a protest against a federal government order setting aside the election of La Rue and three band councillors.

Firing Upheld

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court upheld an arbitration board and school board decision to fire a school secretary. School principal William Clarke dismissed Mary Eady for "usurping his authority" as principal by talking to a woman Mrs. Eady claimed had been "verbally abused" by the principal. Mrs. Eady was given three months' severance pay.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The government has established a 1.2-acre class A park along the road to Barkerville in memory of miner Morgan Blessing who was murdered by his travelling companion John Barry during the Cariboo gold rush.

Schools Closed

STEWART (CP) — Heavy snowfalls and adverse flying conditions have prevented mail from reaching this community for two weeks. More than 200 inches of snow have been recorded this winter. Schools are still closed but may reopen Monday.

Arson Suspected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arson is suspected in a fire that heavily damaged a $100,000 sailing vessel belonging to Paul Wagner of West Vancouver.

Conspiracy Charged

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Police charged four men with "conspiracy to traffic in the drug MDA and possession of MDA for the purpose of trafficking following a hotel room raid in which more than $6,000 worth of the drug was confiscated. Police laid charges against Robert Douglas Cross, 26, of Vancouver, David John Hibes, 22, of Langley, Darryl Jay Rafuse, 20, of Prince George and Terrence William Schuster, 20, also of Vancouver.

Arrival of an Artist —And Other Thoughts

Being some random items from a man's personal diary:

Item: Is there anything more exciting in life than seeing the fulfillment of a man's dreams and talent? Oh, come now, Scott, no more of these rhetorical questions, eh? Okay, but that's how I felt seeing the one-man show of the one-and-only Sid Barron, now on view at the Art Gallery and there until Feb. 11.

Sid has been a serious painter all his adult life. His work has been seen in galleries all across the country. But these 20 paintings and collages, this beautiful burst of color and design and mood, does represent a kind of fruition for Sid who has spent so many years as a commercial artist and drawer of cartoons. A the age of 56 — God, you're old, Sid! — a man and artist has reached fulfillment and I can think of nothing more exciting.

On the opening night of the show a young man came up to Barron and said there was one painting that he just had to have. It was priced at $200 and he was broke. But could he pay Sid $20 a month over the next 10 months? That painting is now marked with a star — meaning "sold" — and it wouldn't surprise me if Sid sees it as the high point of his career.

Item: Mightily pleased to learn today that some 80 Victorians have joined the Association for Public Broadcasting in British Columbia, the group that's out to save television from the hot hand of the hucksters. Herschel Hardin, its president, writes me: "One of the most heartening things about the Victoria response was the enthusiasm and commitment."

There'll be a meeting of all Vancouver Island members on Thursday, Feb. 1, at 8 p.m. in the Victoria Art Gallery. This could be the start of something big.

Item: Mixed emotions all this week, reading of the impasse in the strike of the school employees, and I suppose most men of my vintage who went to small schools have an evergreen memory of a School Caretaker that will prejudice their views in this local trouble.

I vividly remember, myself, the janitor of the small Hollyburn School in West Vancouver who taught me how to make a whistle from an alder branch and made a kite for me that flew six days and nights from the end of Dundarave pier and who taught me more about right and wrong than any teacher I was ever to have.

An anonymous reader sends me the clipping of a column by one Neil Haight in the Braemarbridge (Ont.) Herald-Gazette that's very timely. Haight was reminiscing about a caretaker named Mr. Bull and had this to say:

"As a student I can now think of the many ways he helped us. He was more than a caretaker. He was a friend, one who sympathized, a dispenser of iodine and bandages, as much a part of the school as the teachers. He always found time to be available at recess to watch over the little ones — to tie a shoe lace; to put some iodine on a cut; to bandage a bruised knee; to fix a skipping rope; to keep track of the school softball and rugby ball as they were hard to come by in those days. If the softball was ripped it was Mr. Bull who sewed it up ready for the next game. He seemed always to be there when he was needed most!

"No, you won't find Mr. Bull's name on any school plaques nor will you find his picture on any school wall and his name will never be mentioned at any of the school functions. Such are the ways of man."

I suppose you'll seldom find such a man in today's large schools, but there's a tradition there that doesn't die easily and perhaps that explains why I'm entirely on that side in this particular dispute.

Item: To the Centennial Pool off Colwood way this afternoon for a therapeutic swim and it was like being shot from a cannon back into my youth. The shrill, echoing, reverberating cries of the small fry, the warm, wet-towel, chlorine aroma, the general impression that everyone was an inch away from drowning, the inscrutable, unalarmed young lifeguard — nothing had changed.

A pretty sight was at one end of the pool where perhaps a dozen stoutish young matrons were involved in some slimming exercises, often down on their fine, fulsome buttocks, bending and swaying, and I like to think — though my wife dismissed it as a foolish fancy — that all this incredible effort, in every case, was for some grateful man.

A pretty sight too, was an older, grey-haired instructor, flat-bellied, puckered by constant immersion, who was giving some tiny tots their first lessons in swimming, a man of such patience and understanding that I was moved to tell him, later, that it had impressed me very much.

"It would impress you more," said he, with a sigh, "if you knew how many of these tiny tots are monsters from outer space."

I then dazzled my wife by doing two laps of the pool in a flat 40 seconds — the short way, across the kiddies' end.

'Landmark Decision' Awaited by Ostler

A 21-year-old man, who pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana, today was remanded to Feb. 16 to await what Judge William Ostler termed "a landmark decision" on granting discharges.

Defense counsel for Ian Bailey MacLean had asked Ostler for a conditional discharge for his client, a first offender.

Ostler said there had been "substantial judicial disagreement" across Canada on the matter of discharges and for that reason suggested a remand, pending the outcome of a B.C. Court of Appeals ruling on the matter Feb. 9.

"What happens in that case (the Appeal Court ruling) will then be binding on the whole province," said the judge.

Downtown Malls? Merchants Wonder

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

Some downtown merchants at Government and View have mixed feelings about who their real customers are — cars or people.

Interviews with shopkeepers about a formal proposal to take traffic off Government and View streets in the downtown area and create a tree-lined mall drew varied reactions.

Inge Heimlich, manager of The Quest crafts shop, said she had seen such malls in Switzerland and in downtown Calgary and she liked them and thought they would improve business.

But Derek Bateman, operator of a sporting goods shop, said he thought city council must be mad to consider such a plan.

"I've seen it in action and it worked," Mrs. Heimlich said.

"Tourists want to nip in and out quickly, we should make Wharf and Government one-way streets, that would solve the traffic problem," Bateman said.

Lavone Landie, co-manager of a health food shop and food bar, said she thought it would be nice to have tables on the sidewalk and to get rid of the noisy buses and trucks, but she had doubts about winter business.

"It would certainly be interesting to try it, though," she said. "I must admit I hadn't really thought about it, although I read about the proposal in the paper."

Alistair Macduff, operator of an art gallery, was outraged by the proposal. He said a traffic-free mall downtown would drive business away.

"Business seems to go out to the suburban shopping centres," he said. "What we nice, I admit, but not if it didn't bring the people in," Macduff said.

A young shop assistant sweeping the doorway at Roy Imports said she thought a tree-lined mall would be "fantastic."

At Betty's Cafe the manageress wasn't sure about the whole idea, she said cars sometimes pulled up outside bringing customers in for a meal. She said the crowds on the sidewalks in summer seemed to need more room to move in.

At Souvenirs And Gifts Galore, the operator said she didn't own the store so she didn't want to comment.

The owner of the Irish Linen shop, who wouldn't give his name, said it would be nice to get rid of the trucks (heavy lumber haulers head to Ogden Point docks down Government), but basically he wanted to see detailed plans before he came to a decision.

He admitted such mall schemes might have worked in other towns, other countries — "but what goes in one place doesn't necessarily go in another."

Nora Higgins, co-manager of The Hand Loom, said a mall would be attractive, if tastefully done.

"As long as they give us proper access for deliveries and so on, I think it's a very good idea," she commented.

"It'll relieve pollution, the awful fumes the cars make; it'll get rid of the dreadful noise of the buses. I'm generally in favor of the idea."

Brian Small, secretary of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, who has an office overlooking Government, said there was "no way" the scheme would catch on.

He said there would be traffic problems if Government were closed before outer by-pass roads had been completed — but James Bay residents, he said, would "never allow them to cut up Beacon Hill Park."

"It'll be Broad and View closed off, not Government," he predicted, shouting over the roar of passing trucks and cars as he stood on the sidewalk.

A plan submitted to city council by Ald. Sam Bawlf, due to be discussed in committee Tuesday, would close Government from Humboldt to Yates, and View from Government to beyond Douglas.

What would be one way going south, and Blanshard would be made a through street clear of steep slopes.

Adjoining property owners would be asked to share in costs through a referendum.

BATEMAN
... one-way better

should do is get rid of the parking meters, they make no contribution to the congestion problem at all."

Lang Passing The Buck: Chief

Victoria Police Chief J. F. Gregory said today Justice Minister Otto Lang is passing the buck in accusing the police of inadequately enforcing the recent Bail Reform Act.

"I think that the police, as usual, are being blamed for the mistakes of the legislators," said Gregory.

Lang said he had recently written provincial attorneys-general and told them the law's ability to keep people in custody was not being adequately used.

"We must improve the way police operate within the law," said Lang.

Gregory said, "We are operating within the law. If we're not operating according to public demand then the law is wrong."

"The Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police have made submissions to the government to bolster certain inadequacies in the Bail Reform Act — and we have been ignored."

The government accepted some submissions "but didn't accept others," he added. Saanich Police Chief Robert Peterson agrees with Gregory.

"I think really, we're doing all that can be done under the act. We're just following it the way it's written," he said. Lawyer Michael Hutchison said the new bail reform provisions, which became effective Jan. 1, 1972, have not been abused but have been misinterpreted.

"This has been a point of some consideration in a number of court cases," said Hutchison.

The "major change" in the act is that the onus has been shifted from the defence to the prosecutor to justify the release of the accused, he said.

"We're going to give the benefit of the doubt to a person charged with a criminal offence, which is consistent with our system of the accused being innocent until proven guilty," he said.

Judge Regrets Past Leniency

Two men were today sentenced in Victoria provincial court to a total of four years for armed robbery, Judge William Ostler admitting that previous leniency with one of the accused "had blown up in my face."

John Jeffrey Hannay, 25, and James Brian McWilliams, 18, both of no fixed address, pleaded guilty Wednesday to robbing a gas station attendant at knife-point Jan. 13.

In McWilliams' case, the judge said, a special probation officer had been found and a suspended sentence ordered for the man on another offence "a scant few days" before the robbery took place.

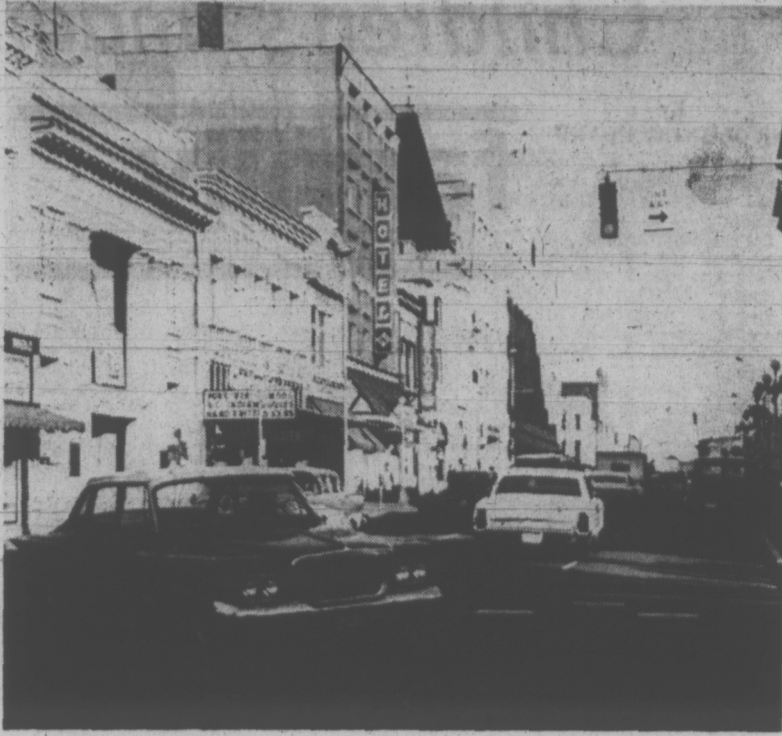

Ostler said that it "seemed impossible to deter McWilliams by kindness" and admitted that an experiment in leniency "had blown up in my face."

Ostler sentenced Hannay, self-confessed ringleader in the robbery, to three years. McWilliams was given 18 months definite, 18 months indeterminate on the robbery charge, one year on another Nov. 30 break-in charge and four months for breach of probation, all sentences to run concurrently.

Conditions In Schools 'Depressing'

By LINDA HUGHES

With negotiation talks resuming Saturday, teachers and principals said today "depressing" is the only word to describe conditions in struck Victoria schools.

In a survey of schools, spokesmen said the psychological effect of dirty conditions was the major problem.

"It's grimy and depressing," one principal said, "the atmosphere just isn't right."

"We spend so much time trying to get children to take a pride in their school and their own cleanliness," another said, "but it's hard to keep doing this when it's obvious to them no one else cares."

All the principals said they were pleased with how well children were trying to keep schools clean themselves.

"The kids keep asking when the custodians will be back," one principal said, "they just don't like sitting in dirty classrooms."

Most schools said there has been no direct effect on instruction except that children can not sit in seminar groups on the floor, most sport activities have been cancelled and other "more enriching extra activities" have been curtailed.

"The washrooms are getting a little high," one teacher said.

Another school said six windows had been broken since the strike by maintenance workers began two weeks ago.

"We weren't even supposed to clean up the broken glass," the principal said. "Of course we had to sweep it out of the classrooms, but we can't fix the windows."

"Our school has only been swept once," another said. "The filth is so thick I don't know how long it will take to clean it all up again."

Most principals commended the clean-up work done by school board supervisory personnel but stressed the impossibility of doing a proper job in all 54 schools in the district.

"I don't know how long morale can hold up in these dirty conditions," one principal said.

Meanwhile, in schools without heat which are open only for one or two hours a day, many parents are becoming more vocal in their protests.

"My children sit in the classroom with heavy coats and hats on," one Margaret

Jenkins parent said. "They just can't learn that way."

Many mothers say their children find it difficult to learn at home and parents aren't always able to help them.

"Parents are being penalized as well," one mother said. "I'm a university student and I have to miss classes and give up my studying time to supervise my children."

"A lot of working mothers have to pay for babysitters or make involved arrangements with neighbors — it's a financial burden."

Parents say children generally look forward to getting back to a normal school routine — the younger ones because they find the upheaval upsetting and the older ones because they're afraid of getting too far behind in their work.

LANSDOWNE TO RE-OPEN

Lansdowne campus of Camosun College will re-open Monday on regular schedules, despite the strike by school board maintenance workers.

Since the strike began two weeks ago, all Camosun classes have been held on their Interurban campus, which is not staffed by the striking CUPE local.

Students and teachers have indicated a strong desire to return to the Lansdowne campus despite cold classrooms, according to principal Grant Fisher, in order that students who have been unable to attend the other campus can resume their normal studies.

All day and evening upgrading, career and academic programs, except basic training for skill development, will resume normal operation at Lansdowne on Monday.

Community service courses scheduled for both campuses will also be operating normally starting Monday.

With the withdrawal of academic courses from Interurban, trades and industrial training students will return to regular schedules at Interurban and Quadra campuses.

Other community service courses, normally held in schools throughout the district, will still be cancelled until the strike ends. Classes will recommence the Monday following the settlement of the strike and compensating sessions will be offered.

VGH Appoints Administrator

The new executive director of Victoria General Hospital is James S. Fair, 39, a pharmacist who is now director of diagnostic services at Vancouver General Hospital.

The hospital board approved hiring him Thursday night on the recommendation of its personnel committee. There was no debate.

Fair, who will take up the chief administrative post at the hospital March 16, replaces Dr. E. G. Q. Van Tilburg, who resigned last July citing "irreconcilable differences" with the board.

Acting chairman Tom Shorthouse declined today to say what Fair's salary will be but earlier indications were the job carried a salary in the $25,000 range.

Shorthouse said the board would give consideration to making public Fair's salary when he arrives on the job. Meanwhile directors did not want to become involved in "pitting one job against another."

Children's Imagination Overcomes Automation

By NICOLE STRICKLAND

Pull the string and the pretty doll with the shiny blond curls says "Hello, Mommy".

Put one hand here and one hand there and your talking clock tells you: "It's 4 o'clock".

Flick the 'on' switch and the robot's eyes twirl and his feet move and his arms swing.

Turn the soft vinyl head of the soft plastic baby and she cries real tears, and her mouth droops down. Adjust her head and she's smiling again.

Programmed toys, with programmed responses. No need for a child to imagine a conversation with her doll — the conversation is pre-recorded, on tiny discs imbedded in the toy's body.

No need to stretch the creative process too far when dolls walk, electric football plays its own game and electrically keeps its own score, when doll houses come with actual electric lights and when musical instruments play themselves, provided you keep enough fresh batteries on hand.

With Christmas past and many of these automated, expensive toys discarded by their recipients, one wonders if this type of playing works to reduce the amount of a child's creative output. Right? "Wrong", says Dr. George Milton, of the University of Victoria's Psychology department. "The trend toward automated toys as we know them today does not stifle the child's creativity. Children quickly become bored with the automated things that the toys are automated to do, and so invent new things for them to do.

family

"The child will very quickly change the purpose of these toys, and have them doing things that the designers never intended. No matter how much or how little you provide, the child will still use his imagination."

Dr. Milton says that poor children, whose parents cannot afford the automated gadgets of the toy industry, don't suffer from a lack of these toys, but may suffer because they feel less adequate by not having these things. Although difficult for less wealthy parents living in a materialistic world, it is important to stress non-material values to the child, to counteract such possible feelings of inadequacy.

"All children, even the wealthiest, probably love a cardboard box," comments Dr. Milton. "The biggest danger in children's toys, other than the physical safety factor, is buying a toy too complicated for the level of the child's mastery. He'll get frustrated, angry with himself, and call himself stupid and dumb if the toy isn't quietly removed and replaced with something more suitable to his own level."

Dr. Milton's views about providing a child with toys go against the trend in today's parental thinking, but are quite logical.

"My opinion is that toy guns don't do any harm in themselves. When children 'play guns' they engage in healthy, active play... they run, jump, hide, invent plots, and dramas. Also, whether or not the parent gives the child guns, he will play guns with his fingers, or with sticks. I see nothing wrong with that."

Despite this thinking from a child psychologist, there is a trend away from militaristic toys.

The "G.I. Joe" of a few years ago has become an adventurer, complete with scuba gear, or an explorer, outfitted for a safari. Dr. Milton notes a trend to fundamental concept learning toys, where clocks, letters, and numbers, as well as round pegs fitting into round holes teach the child basic skills.

He notes a trend to more interaction games, where several children play together, increasing social skills.

He does not foresee more automation than exists now, because "Given the cost factor, it would just be too expensive. And today's toys are really quite nice as they are."

Young imaginations make them do more than the maker ever planned

HINDUS BURNED THEIR DEAD ON BEACH

James Bay Hotel here until they found a house.

Mrs. McKeachie remembers her husband received strict instructions from his mother in Scotland not to choose a new house, as the plaster would still be wet.

"So we settled for a cottage with a big garden on Ribbet Street, near Dallas Road."

There, the first people they met were Mr. and Mrs. James Petrie. Today, Mrs. McKeachie and Mrs. Petrie (who will be 98 in April) are still good friends.

Not far away on Dallas

Road were Capt. and Mrs. William R. Crawford, a Scottish couple. He was head of the Empire Stevedoring Company where McKeachie finally went to work in the office.

They had no children but Mrs. McKeachie says that "Cathy helped me bring up mine."

It was from the Crawford's verandah that she remembers seeing a Hindu cremation.

They piled beach logs up in layers, placed the white-clad turbaned body on the top, scattered flowers around it, then lit the fire.

Thick smoke rose from the funeral pyre throughout the day. "Then toward evening they began pouring water on the ashes and gradually the fire went out."

Influenced by a visit from Mrs. William Templeman (wife of the first publisher of this newspaper) and Mrs. William Aird, the newlyweds joined First Presbyterian Church, now First United, when it stood at the corner of Pandora and Blanshard.

They took part in the congregation walk from that old church to the site of the present church on Quadra at Balmoral, for laying of the corner stone. And they were active in the work of that church for many years.

They were also ardent lawn bowlers and long-time members of the Beacon Hill Club. As five sons and a daughter were born the McKeachie moved six times to bigger homes until they settled at the family place on Oxford in the Fairfield district.

Today, Jeannie McKeachie, now a widow, lives in a comfortable apartment on Fairfield, surrounded by her treasured possessions and pictures of her family.

Four sons and a daughter are living—Alex, Tom, Jim and Mary (Mrs. Bill Walker). There are also 18 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Her hobbies now are reading, watching television "especially the quiz programs" and knitting.

"I keep well ahead knitting baby clothes and shawls these days," she tells you. "With the grandchildren grown up and many of them married, there are babies coming along every year."

Every country makes an extra effort to produce attractive tourist literature that is somewhat different from competing brochures. In this respect Hong Kong certainly scores very high.

Actually, Hong Kong is not a country. It is a settlement and free port administered by the British and located on the South Coast of China. It stretches across 236 islands with a total population of close to four million.

From Hong Kong Downtown, you will learn, for example, that this settlement has something in common with British Columbia. The capital of both is called Victoria. However Hong Kong's Victoria can boast a twin-city, namely Kowloon.

Hong Kong Out-of-Town is a reminder that outside the hustle and bustle of modern Victoria and Kowloon, the placid world of old China still exists.

Talk to Mrs. Alex McKeachie and you find her memories of Victoria stretch back to a time when there were few homes and lots of open space around Dallas Road "right from where the grain elevators stand today to Clover Point."

She describes the Empress Hotel when she first saw it as "just the middle section... with no wings." And she recalls that after The Bay was built it stood boarded up "for a long time before it was ever opened."

Mrs. McKeachie will celebrate her 88th birthday on Saturday. She was born Jean Young in Kilmarnock, Scotland, and lived all her young years in Sorbie Parish, Wigtownshire, where her father acquired land.

In her teens she helped on that land where there were 80 cows to milk daily. "I milked 12 of them myself."

Later, after a term at dairy school in Kilmarnock, her father put her in charge of his small cheddar cheese factory on the farm.

"We processed around 200 gallons of milk a day," she remembers. "Sold the cheese in bulk and got around sixpence a pound for it."

Jean Young first met Alex McKeachie when they were small children in Sorbie Parish.

"We started school on the same day. Sat in the same classroom. Grew up together and were engaged before Alex went off to London to work."

There his health failed and, on the advice of his doctor, he travelled to Canada.

During a visit with relatives in Victoria he found work in the office of the Island Investment Company. And, with a salary of $135 a month (a princely sum in those days) sent for his fiancée to join him. That was in 1912.

They were married in Vancouver by Rev. J. G. Wilson (brother of Victoria's Dr. W. G. Wilson) and lived in the

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Sat., Jan. 27, 1973
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Dig deep for additional data. Plenty of superficial information is available but generally useless. One who claims to be psychic may merely be neurotic. Be aware of this and be cautious. Don't delegate important duties. Check time print.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be sure you are correctly quoted. Tendency exists for others to speak for you — without permission. Gemini, Virgo individuals could figure prominently. Obtain hint from Aries message. Basic change, involving travel, is due.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Health of family member may be of some concern. Key is to maintain balanced, cheerful disposition. Be diplomatic. Purchase of gift for special occasion could lend great cheer. Taurus, Libra persons are likely to be in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 21): Avoid self-deception. Perfect techniques. If you are bored, so will your audience also lose interest. Pisces individual could whisper sweet nothings. Strive to see situation if actually exists.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 23): Practical issues dominate. You are given more responsibility. With it comes great opportunity. Reward potential also is magnified. Older individual lends benefit of experience. Be receptive. Throw aside false pride.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 23): Finish project. Find ways of reaching more persons. Write, advertise and distribute. Get around. Put ideas on paper and take steps to protect them. Restless relative may make unusual request. Sense of humor will aid. Don't panic!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23): New approach now results in solid gain. Accent independence of thought, action. Spotlight valuable, special collections. Leo is in picture. Bring forth creative resources. Debt owed you will be paid.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your environment, basic needs are emphasized. What had been an obstruction is removed. You can find allies where you thought only foes existed. Key now is to take a chance on your own abilities. You're due for pleasant surprise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be willing to laugh at your own foibles. Sordid operations; there is no need now to be limited, restricted.

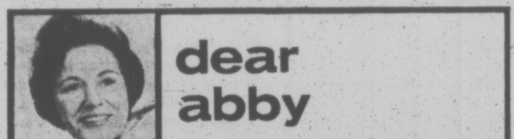

One who is fearful needs encouragement. Give it and lift up rather than being dragged to lower level.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Study Scorpio message. Some of your fondest hopes, wishes can be fulfilled. Key is to be thorough and persistent. Don't be satisfied with compatibility with one who has your best interests at heart. Stop resenting individual you really need.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Spotlight is on change, travel, variety. Gemini, Virgo individuals figure prominently. Highlight ability to analyze. Don't be satisfied with happenings — find out the why of events. Your opinion now is valued. Know it and respond accordingly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your natural sensitivity comes to fore — you are able to understand individual who has been a puzzle. This will lead to self-revelation. Your philosophical concepts are strengthened. You become better person in sense that you know yourself.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are drawn to areas that enable you to communicate, to dramatize, to aid those with problems. Emotional burdens will be lifted and you will have more fun in 1973. A significant month this year will be May. Family dispute is settled and you make important move in February.

Marriage in Jeopardy Says Soap Opera Widow

DEAR ABBY: You get lots of letters from "football widows." How about putting in a good word for "soap opera widowers"?

Julia and I have been married three years. I used to call her every day on my lunch hour, and on my days off we used to go around and see the sights. On workdays I'd get off at 5 p.m. and come home to a clean house, smiling wife, and a good supper. Not any more.

For the last five months I've been coming home to a messy house, TV dinner and wife with a tear-stained face. The reason being she watches soap operas on TV all day long.

I can't even call her on my lunch hour because she's in the middle of one of those shows and she doesn't want to miss even two minutes of it to talk to me.

I still love my wife, but it's getting to the point where I hate to come home. Please print this, Maybe Julia will see it and realize how I feel—Soap Opera Widower.

DEAR WIDOWER: And what if she doesn't see it? A message as important as this should be telegraphed right over the home plate. Tell Julia how you feel, Mister, and the sooner the better or you'll be starring in "Divorce Court" in real life together.

DEAR ABBY: Since your reading audience is vast, may I pass on some advice that is valuable, yet possibly not well known? It is regarding burns.

Not too many years ago, a physician burned his hand, and immediately immersed it in ice water. He found that the pain left while it was in the ice water, but what surprised him even more was that there was no blistering, redness, ulceration or scarring. He reported the incident, and now many doctors order immediate ice baths until they can get there. The results have been amazing.

Check this out with your medical experts if you have any doubts.—Doctor.

DEAR DOCTOR: I've been aware of the above discovery concerning burns for some time. But it won't hurt to remind folks to reach for an ice cube instead of the greasy stuff.

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to comment on the letter signed "Right or Wrong" from the wife who was mad at her husband because he was too tired to mow the lawn then he went next door and worked on the roof of a neighbor's house. This neighbor was a cute young widow whom the wife described as a woman who never paid for anything "in cash."

When the wife saw her husband working on her neighbor's roof she went over and hit him a good one with the dust mop, and you said it was a draw between which one was right or wrong.

I don't think so. A woman should never hit a man unless she is prepared to be hit back. I have never hit my wife, but then she's never hit me, either.

Also, that wife should find out what it is the widow pays with and do likewise.—Reader.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to: Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Seek a Divorce, or Stick It Out: L.I.P. Grant Offers Place to Think

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Victoria women who face the decision of whether to pack their marriage in and leave their husbands, or stick it out, will soon have a half-way house to head for.

A transition house where women can quietly retreat to make those kinds of decisions, proposed by the Victoria Women's Centre as part of a $30,000 Local Initiatives Project received approval Friday.

The house, to operate 24 hours a day, seven days a week in a central Victoria location to be chosen soon, will house facilities for six residents.

EMERGENCY SHELTER

It will also be available as an emergency shelter for women who arrive in the city with children and very little money, explained Kathleen Orton, a Women's Centre worker.

Single women with children who arrive in the city in financial straits now have only one avenue open to them. They can apply for assistance from welfare, and if successful they are billeted in a motel.

"That kind of arrangement is too isolated," said Mrs. Orton. "The woman has no chance to discuss her problems or get to know the city."

OTHER AGENCIES

Several agencies which attempt to provide housing, such as Victoria Rental Aid, stress permanent accommodation rather than a place where a woman can rest from everyday domestic situations and re-evaluate their problems.

"The transition house is also designed for the woman who is in an unhappy, growth-denying marriage, who may want to live on her own. Often she finds she has neither the capabilities to support herself and her children if she keeps custody," she added.

"She needs somewhere to stay—somewhere comfortable where she may be relieved of child-care duties for a few hours. It'll be somewhere to rest and think over the situation before making definite decisions."

"The house will also serve as a half-way house to those who have decided to make the break complete."

Staff members, it is planned, will give counselling and advice on child-care, how to live on a reduced income, work counselling, day-care information and referral service to other agencies.

A house manager and domestic consultant and courses on nutrition and "how to scrounge" are also planned.

Maximum length of stay has been set at one week and cost to the resident will be based on ability to pay.

Residents will be asked if possible to provide their own bedding and, if possible money for food.

House staff will be equipped to help her find new accommodations.

"We're not trying to tell women what to do, we're just trying to make it easy for women to explore their own lives in conjunction with their situation," said Gloria Deming-Wrigley, a psychologist and a Centre worker.

The Centre which operates as a collective organization, started at the Oak Bay Junction last May funded by an Opportunities for Youth grant.

It recently moved headquarters to an office at 738 Fort, and has operated on a volunteer basis since the OYF grant ran out in September.

FEMINIST LIBRARY

It was established to provide a meeting place for women to gather and explore their needs and find solutions to problems originating from the changing role of women in society.

A feminist library, discussion groups, information in legal and medical matters and a newsletter originate in the office, and a total staff of 10 will be maintained through the LIP grant.

Also planned and financed by the grant is a series of neighborhood houses which will operate as grass-roots extensions of the centre.

"We don't want to become a big women's agency," explained Mrs. Deming-Wrigley.

The neighborhood houses — to be volunteered by women in different neighborhoods for six hours a week — will simply be a place for women to get together to discuss group needs, child care, etc.

"Women are the ones most frequently home and they know the needs of their neighborhood," a Centre worker added.

City resource information and counselling will be provided by the centre to assist neighbors in neighborhood problems.

Love Doctors on Increase

NEW YORK (AP) — They range from lovelorn columnists to highly-trained therapists; from self-proclaimed sex experts to scientific sex researchers; from encounter group leaders to hypnotists; from authors of how-to manuals to dual sex co-therapy teams.

They include anyone who pretends authority to treat sexual, emotional or marital dysfunction, says Patrick M. McGrady Jr., who has written a book about them called The Love Doctors.

"I realized there was a new subculture that could have a tremendous influence on us," said the author in an interview.

During three years of work on the book he interviewed such subjects as Dr. David Reuben, Dear Abby, Ann Landers, Dr. Joyce Brothers and Masters and Johnson.

"I wanted to know who these people were who address themselves to our problems, whether they are any good or just as hung up as the rest of us," he continued. "Most went to great lengths to keep anyone from finding out. They were reluctant to talk to me."

"I don't know of a really good marriage at all," declared McGrady, now married for the second time.

"Ninety per cent of them have grave faults and some couples stick together for so many bad reasons. Eventually the sexual relationship plays a tremendous role in how the marriage turns out."

Most often, he said, it is the woman who is more realistic about the necessity for seeking help. "As a result of women's lib women have desired they have never had before in the sexual area and all other areas; they want more out of life."

The field of sex problem treatment was once dominated by the Freudian psychoanalytic school, but they're being "utterly wiped out" because people want a cure "and psychoanalysis is not a cure."

"Freudians destroy more marriages than they help," McGrady noted.

"The paper therapists can be of tremendous help in an informal, educational way," McGrady said. "Though the format of the column requires readability and humor for which wisdom must often be sacrificed, the writers come up with good answers from the experts they consult."

"But I have not seen anybody, with the exception of Masters and Johnson, who can successfully reverse a severe problem of sexual dysfunction when the marriage is in a terminal state," he said.

Such teams, though growing in number, can treat a limited number of couples. Many unqualified persons take advantage of those who need help, McGrady said.

"Ideally, those who are in the medical profession should acquire the love doctor arts because that's where patients bring their problems," said the author.

"But everybody should be a bit of a love doctor and learn how to communicate."

WOMEN MEDICS INCREASE

OTTAWA (CP) — More men are going to have to get used to taking their clothes off in front of strange women.

The percentage of women students in Canadian medical schools has tripled in the last 15 years, a report of enrolments says.

Dr. R. M. Grainger, research director of the Association of Canadian Medical Colleges (ACMC), made the report in an article on student enrolments between 1957-58 and 1971-72.

In the article in the Canadian Medical Association Journal, Dr. Grainger said women comprised seven per cent of students in medical colleges in 1957-58. This figure rose to 20.8 per cent for 1971-72.

Total enrolment in the 16 Canadian medical schools in the fall of 1971 was 5,592 compared with 3,683 in 1957.

Numbers of students entering medicine rose to 1,568 in 1971 compared with 1,011 in 1957, he said.

The number of women entering in 1971 was 332 or 21.2 per cent.

"Therefore, there is a continuing trend toward training more women physicians," he said.

Dr. Grainger's findings also showed that 95.2 per cent of students were Canadian.

Need for Sleep Varies, Insomnia Research Shows

By LEE LINDER

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An insomnia researcher is using a lie detector to tell how much sleep a person really needs. And if the polygraph readings are correct, people are being shortchanged in rest.

"Eight hours, more or less, has been universally accepted as the normal sleep pattern for an adult," reports Dr. Eugene Aserinsky, professor of physiology at Jefferson Medical College.

"But our studies indicate eight hours may be short, and that 10 hours might be more satisfying—and maybe even more healthful."

Aserinsky, who says he's been sleep testing since 1951, believes the research now under way may uncover a body chemical that provokes wakefulness.

"If this is true, and if the chemical can be isolated, it is possible that we might be able to shorten or lengthen sleep when necessary," he said.

"Abnormally, such a chemical would produce long wakefulness which is insomnia. It is not simply a matter of hunger or a full bladder which terminates sleep."

In his experiments, volunteer subjects, most of them medical students, enter Aserinsky's sleep lab for 56 straight hours of in-bed isolation.

They are hooked by tiny electrodes to a polygraph which checks rapid eye movements, or REM, a measure of sleep. Aserinsky says he discovered two decades ago.

"When the REM frequency reaches a peak, sleep has reached the saturation level," Aserinsky explains. "The time required to reach that point spells the maximum number of hours a person needs each night without disturbing his next night's sleep."

"The Jefferson physiologist says no matter how hard one tries, the supersaturation point of sleep in one 24-hour day without drugs is 16 hours, or just what a newborn infant gets."

He says he thinks the research could be useful in determining that the physiological need for waking is as urgent as the need for sleep—that insomnia may not really be so bad.

"Instead of asking about how much sleep we need, maybe we should consider how long we need to be awake," Aserinsky says.

"One can avoid sleep for 24 consecutive hours, but it is practically impossible to avoid wakefulness in a whole day."

Safety Check List for Appliances

TORONTO (CP) — In these days when everyone has a house full of machinery, it may be hard to keep track of all the things that should be done to ensure they are safe to operate.

The Industrial Accident Prevention Association has a suggested check list.

It begins by suggesting you date and file instructions, guarantees and any other useful paper that comes with an appliance.

Be sure you know the capacity of your home wiring circuits. You should not connect more than 1,600 watts on a general-purpose circuit unless you know its capacity is adequate to handle it.

If cord insulation is worn, cracked or crumbled, replace the entire cord. Do not run cords over hot pipes or radiators or other sources of heat.

Be sure each appliance has an electric cord of the proper size for safe operation. Don't switch cords among different appliances.

If a fuse blows after you have plugged an appliance and unplug the appliance and replace the fuse. If it blows a second time, there is probably something wrong with the appliance or with the wiring. They should be inspected and repaired.

Always disconnect electrical appliances before you oil or clean them.

Examine appliances from time to time to be sure they are working properly. If you notice blinking lights or erratic on-off periods, the appliance should be checked and repaired or replaced.

There are signs showing if a circuit is overloaded. They include dimming of lights, or slowing in the heating of an appliance when motors start or when other appliances are turned on.

Be sure fuses are the correct size.

Proper placement is necessary for appliances. They should be set on firm, level surfaces so they won't tip.

Heating appliances should have plenty of surrounding room to prevent scorching or burning furniture or cupboards or walls.

Be sure laundry appliances are correctly grounded. Both clothes washer and dryer should have three pronged plugs and be connected to a three-wire grounded system.

Find out whether your motor-driven appliances are lubricated for life. Those that aren't need regular oiling and servicing, even though they are not in daily use. But remember that too much oil may be bad for motors. Your owner's manual should give you exact directions.

Pre-Natal Tests Spot Mongolism

EDMONTON (CP) — More than 40 diseases or birth defects can be diagnosed in developing babies during pregnancies through a relatively low-risk test, a panel of medical geneticists said Wednesday.

The five experts discussed the pros and cons of pre-natal diagnosis before a joint meeting of the Canadian Society for Clinical Investigation and the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons. The method described was amniocentesis, withdrawal of fluid from the womb through a needle inserted into the prospective mother's abdomen.

Dr. A. G. Motulsky of the University of Washington, Seattle, estimated that about 500 babies with mongolism — severe mental and physical retardation — are born each year in Canada. At least 50 per cent of these babies were children of women over age 40.

If amniocentesis were to be done early in the pregnancies of all women over age 40, those who would have nongoi-loid babies could be determined and the woman could, if she wished, have the pregnancy terminated.

Such a screening procedure effectively would reduce the numbers of mongoloids and the associated social, emotional and economic costs, he said.

Dr. Louis Siminovitch of the University of Toronto said doctors also must consider other ethical and social problems.

"Amniocentesis offers enormous potential in the area of preventive medicine," he said. However, the general public might develop the belief that the birth of all mongoloids should have been prevented, regardless of the attitudes of the parents involved.

"It's conceivable the government would say: You can have it, but we won't pay for it."

Dr. Motulsky said that it was probable that some diseases could be eliminated altogether by proper genetic counselling and by pre-natal before birth diagnosis.

RECORDS SET AT FUR SALE

WINNIPEG (CP) — Sales of nearly $5 million are expected by the time the gavel comes down today for the last time on one of the largest fur auctions ever held in Winnipeg. About 100 foreign buyers from the Soviet Union, Switzerland, England, Germany and the United States are on hand, and prices for many furs are about twice what they were last year, says auctioneer Maurice Soudack.

Buyers say several factors have driven prices up this year. One is that fur fashions, particularly in long-haired pelts, are popular in Europe, and the best skins come from Northern Canada.

Wednesday, a top beaver pelt brought $60, a considerable jump in price from last year's top price of about $40. And bigger jumps were expected in long-haired furs — wolf, lynx, fox, badger and even raccoon.

Manitoba 'Locked Into Hydro Plan'

ILE-DES-CHENES, Man. (CP) — Premier Ed Schreyer told a nominating meeting Thursday night that Manitoba is financially locked into its decision to develop the full Hydro potential of the Nelson River and that he has no regrets.

The premier said hundreds of millions of dollars have already been committed to diverting the Churchill River and regulating Lake Winnipeg as part of hydro development and that any suggestion to forget about the Churchill diversion "is economic madness and stupidity."

Schreyer also announced a $14 million program of special loans plus increased per capita grants to free municipalities from total dependence on the property tax.

He also said the "dream" of a province-owned bank offering low-interest loans to municipalities was nearing reality.

Pork for Japan

SASKATOON (CP) — Western Canada is the only major agricultural region able to produce immediately the quantity and quality of pork demanded by Japan and Southeast Asia. Provincial Agriculture Minister John Messer told the Saskatchewan Hog Producers' Association it is necessary to maintain steadily increasing pork production and to use judgment and joint action in marketing pork products on a western regional basis.

Wheat Research

SASKATOON (CP) — United Grain Growers Ltd. has granted $10,000 to the University of Saskatchewan to help develop a method of predicting drought resistance in wheat. Western Canada has not had a serious drought in about 10 years, but the dry spells of earlier years could return and it is important to be prepared, said Dr. Graham Simpson who heads the study.

Land Option Taken

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government has taken an option on territory near the Edmonton industrial airport to provide for possible expansion of the Northern Alberta Institute of Technology. Purchase cost is expected to be less than $5 million. No decision on actual purchase of the land is anticipated until early in 1975.

TV Station Bid

YORKTON, Sask. (CP) — Noral Communications Ltd. has applied to the Canadian Radio-Television Commission for permission to establish a third English-language television station in Edmonton. President George Skinner said Noral Communications has made a commitment to offer the public a substantial interest in the station.

Saskatchewan Backs the Family Farm

Times News Services
REGINA — In a brief but promise-packed throne speech, Saskatchewan's New Democratic Party government Thursday pledged hefty support for the family farm as the basic unit of economic life in the province.

A program called Farm Start was announced which would offer low-cost supervised credit related to livestock through a system of earned grants which would make it easier for young people to assemble the necessary resources to put their farms on a viable basis.

The government also earmarked grants for development of major tourist attractions in the province and boosted the role of the department of industry and commerce in luring new businesses to Saskatchewan.

Funds were also pledged for development of export contacts and prospecting for hard-rock minerals in the northern part of the province.

Some Perennials
Like It Cool

Hardy flowering perennials do not all want heat for germinating their seeds, though so many flower most abundantly in the warmth of summer sunshine.

Delphiniums like the coolness of late fall outdoors or early spring to grow from seed, but it must be fresh seed less than a year old from time of ripening.

High priced seed only seems that way until you spread its cost over the number of plants produced, which would cost you 75 cents each if bought as established young roots.

The Pacific Giant hybrid seed suits our coast climate. Originated by Vetterle and Reinelt of California, the seed is available as a mixture of colors, or as separates in light and dark blue, lavender, mauve and a splended pure white.

Using a sowing mixture of half screened compost and half sand to prevent damping off at the cool temperatures of 45 to 55 degs. F. which best aids delphinium seed germination. A scattering of fine sand over the seeds also prevents loss of moisture from below and lessens the need for frequent watering.

Cover the pot or seed box with glass and paper until sprouting can be seen in about eight or 10 days. From then on the seedlings will need good daylight overhead though not strong sunlight until they are pricked out into separate small containers.

A covered coldframe is a good place so long as freezing does not occur at night. A small number of seeds in a container can be placed inside a newspaper padded shallow carton, set on a porch or sundeck with the carton flap open during the day and closed at night. Check daily for germination, for the paper must come off at once to produce sturdy seedlings. They need strong light.

For growing delphiniums a humusy soil is needed. By mid April, earlier in workable soils, the young plants are put into the garden from the containers without disturbing the roots.

Give them at least 18 inches between plants, for according to how well you grow them, the stems will go to six feet or more, and need staking if the garden is windy.

Some of the best delphinium spikes grown in Victoria (they were first prize winners in June flower shows) were produced by throwing a whole pail full of mixed cow and horse manure into each hole before setting in the young plant.

I couldn't believe my eyes as I watched this nurseryman happily doing his planting. "It's the only way to grow delphiniums. There's plenty of manure if people keep their eyes open for ads, and for signs along country roads."

Delphinium plants are not long lived. They give one splendid spike the first September and several good ones the following June. Thinning to three will produce better blooms.

Replace either by sowing fresh seeds in August or in late winter; or by growing new plants from base cuttings from the plants in early spring.

Your own collection of seed will give fair results if you start with a good strain. You will at least have an almost 100 per cent germination by sowing in late August.

Seedlings from that sowing will need coldframe protection over winter since their roots will be young and shallow.

SOLUTION MONDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal is a top-level bridge mystery, befitting the talents of a Sherlock Holmes, a Hercule Poirot, or a Perry Mason. You are informed that our West defender slipped in his defense, and thereby enabled South to fulfill a contract that should have been defeated. Can you isolate West's mistake?

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Look at that sign, Dad," exclaimed Harry. "What a funny number."

Greg smiled. "Just the population of this city, an ordinary six-digit number," he said. "What's funny about that?"

"Plenty," replied the boy. "It's exactly half the square of its last three figures."

Harry was right. What was the number?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: SENSE was 18918.

LLOYD PERCIVAL, President of the Fitness Institute in Toronto, Ontario, explains the importance of physical health in dealing with the stresses of life. Mr. Percival is featured in the new program in the multi-award winning series, The Human Journey — How We Adapt, to be telecast on Sunday, January 28, at 10 p.m. on Channel 8. The program investigates ways in which we can live a more satisfying and healthy life through mental and physical health.

A Better Life...on Human Journey

"A lash of a whip and a passionate kiss are equally stressful, not equally pleasant." ... Hans Selye.

When almost two million Canadians watched CTV newsman Harvey Kirk host the Network's Federal Election night coverage on October 30, no one realized that for the entire broadcast Kirk's heartbeat was being monitored on an EGG machine. The experiment was being conducted to test the veteran newsman's ability to cope with stress, and forms part of the latest episode in The Human Journey series of programs, How We Adapt, telecasting on Sunday, January 28, 10-11 p.m. on channel 8. This new program in the multi-award winning series investigates ways in which we can live a more satisfying and healthy life through dieting and mental and physical health.

The Harvey Kirk segment illustrates the importance of being able to cope with stress in our day to day lives. Many people consider stress only in its relationship to bad news or emergency situations. However, Dr. Hans Selye, Director of the Institute of Experimental Medicine and Surgery at the University of Montreal, says that stress is also related to good news and happiness. Both good and bad news require the same degree of biochemical changes in the body. "A lash of a whip and a passionate kiss are equally stressful, not equally pleasant," states Dr. Selye.

Kirk's 'at rest' heart rate, tested prior to his eight-hour-long Election Night telecast, was 68 beats per minute. Moments before the start of the broadcast Kirk's rate jumped 50 per cent to 102 beats per minute, then settled down over the evening to average 82 beats per minute. Dr. William O'Hara of the Canadian Armed Forces who supervised the testing interpreted Harvey's performance as being rather calm when compared to the 200 beats per minute of a race-car driver waiting for the starter's flag, the 110-135 figure for a man doing heavy work in a factory, and the plus-100 for miners and mailmen doing their daily jobs.

In Montreal, the program examines the work of Dr. Agnes Higgins, Executive Director of the Montreal Diet Dispensary, who supervises a program which supplements the diets of pregnant women. Dr. Higgins believes that children born to mothers with inadequate diets come into the world already disadvantaged, and are potentially more likely to incur both major and minor sicknesses than children born to mothers who have healthy diets.

Also contributing to the program are Dr. Elmer Green, Director of the Voluntary Control Project at the Menninger Foundation in Topeka, Kansas, talking about the brain's alpha waves, Mr. Lloyd Percival, President of the Fitness Institute in Toronto, and a discussion and demonstration of karate, an ancient marshall art that is a marriage between the mind and the body.

How We Adapt was produced and directed by Bill Bahting and written by Robert Conroy. Researchers on the program were Jessica Markland and Victor Schwartzman with photography by Robert Rouveroy and editing by Carl Connell and Paul Lang. Martha Henry narrates. The executive producer of the Human Journey is Jerry Lawton.

MOVIES

Saturday

The Letter (xxx), on 13 at 4. Somerset Maugham's story of murder and retribution in the Far East transfers to the screen with excellent direction and a competent cast including Bette Davis and Herbert Marshall - vintage 1940.

The Birds and the Bees (xx), on 5 at 4:30. Routine 1956 musical comedy starring George Gobel, Mitzi Gaynor and David Niven.

Air Force (xxx), on 13 at 7:30. Dated but still exciting Second World War story about an army plane which takes off for the Pacific, December 6, 1941, starring John Garfield and Faye Emerson.

Deadfall (x), on 6 at 8:30. Michael Caine stars in this English-made crime-drama built around jewel thievery and Freudian relationships.

Play Dirty (xx), on 5 at 9. A 1969 Italian-made. Second World War drama starring Michael Caine, Harry Andrews and Vivian Pickles.

Diary of a Mad Housewife (xxxx), on 8 at 9. Carrie Snodgrass and Richard Benjamin star in this excellent 1970 film, about a young couple living in a world of social climbing and shoddy values.

Grand Illusion (xxxx), on 9 at 9. Jean Renoir's 1937 anti-war classic is one of the all-time great films about the men of the First World War. The plot is centred on four men held in a prison camp, each from a different social background, each with their prejudices and private illusions. An excellent cast includes Jean Gabin and Erich von Stroheim.

The Unsinkable Molly Brown (xxx), on 7 at 11. Debbie Reynolds won an Oscar nomination for her role in this 1954 musical set in turn-of-the-century Denver.

20 Million Miles to Earth (x), on 13 at 11. Routine sci-fi. Lolita (xxx), on 12 at 11. Stanley Kubrick (A Clockwork Orange) directed this 1961 drama about scholarly Humbert Humbert's self-destructive obsession, for young Lolita Haze, starring James Mason, Sue Lyon, Shelley Winters and Peter Sellers.

Diary of a Mad Housewife (xxxx), on 6 at 11:30. (See earlier for details.)

The World of Henry Orient (xxxx), on 8 at 11:30. A rare combination of humor and sensitivity makes this 1964

comedy starring Peter Sellers very special. It tells the wacky story about a madly egocentric and amorous concert pianist, who is hilariously pursued all around New York City by two teenage fans. The adoring girls (Tippy Walker and Merrie Spaeth) steal the picture from under the noses of Sellers and a fine company of supporting actors including Angela Lansbury and Paula Prentiss.

Sun Valley Serenade (xx), on 4 at 11:45. A gushy 1941 musical comedy starring Sonja Henie and John Payne.

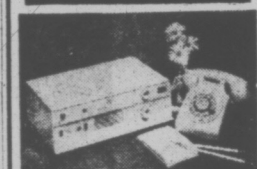

Che! (x), on 5 at 11:45. Omar Sharif wastes his time and talent in this romanticized 1969 Hollywood version of Ernesto "Che" Guevara's role in the Cuban revolution.

Fireball 500 (x), on 2 at 12:15. Frankie Avalon plays a stock-car driver in this 1966 drama.

FORMER NHL STAR SIGNS WITH CBC

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation today announced that Howie Meeker, one of Canada's outstanding sports personalities, has signed a contract as sports director for the CBC in St. John's Newfoundland. The contract between Meeker and the CBC, provides for his involvement in sports coverage on CBC television and also with CBC radio.

Howie Meeker brings a wealth of experience and knowledge to his new position with the CBC. A native of New Hamburg Ontario, he served in England and throughout Europe with the Royal Canadian Engineers from 1942 to 1946. On his return to Canada, he began an active career as a star right-winger with the NHL, playing in that league from 1946 to 1954. During these years he captured the Calder Trophy and was a member of four Toronto Maple Leaf Stanley Cup teams. In 1954 he began a new career, when he took over as coach of Pittsburgh in the American Hockey League, guiding that team to the league championship in 1955. He remained with Pittsburgh until taking over as coach of the Toronto Maple Leafs in 1956. The next year he was named general manager of the Leafs.

In 1958 he began still another successful career, as a sports broadcaster, when he moved to St. John's, Newfoundland, as sports commentator with CJON, the local CTV station. He has been with CJON in this capacity until his signing this week with the CBC.

In addition to his hockey involvement, Meeker has also been active in fishing, hunting, horseback riding, and a number of other sports. He served as a Member of Parliament for Waterloo South from 1956 to 1958, and was appointed chairman of the Royal Commission on Youth and Sports in Newfoundland in 1968. Since 1969 he has appeared as guest analyst on a number of Hockey Night in Canada telecasts, and this fall was one of the commentators covering the Canada-Russia hockey series.

Under his new contract Meeker will be featured each week night on the CBC's St. John's information series Here and Now, will handle special sports originations, will provide regular editorial comment for CBC radio, and will continue to appear on a number of Hockey Night in Canada telecasts through the season.

In commenting on the signing of Meeker, the CBC's director of television in St. John's Darce Fardy, said, "Howie, we feel, will add a depth of experience and authority to the CBC's sports coverage in Newfoundland. His opinions are sometimes controversial, but are always honest and forthright. It's a pleasure to welcome him to our information area."

MOVIES

Tuesday

Moss Rose (xxx), on 13 at noon. A slow moving but well-played and interesting Victorian mystery, made in 1947 and starring Ethel Barrymore, Peggy Cummins and Victor Mature.

The Man Who Understood Women (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. Henry Fonda and Leslie Caron star in this excellent 1959 tragi-comic Hollywood spoof about a jealous film producer who marries the girl he makes a star.

Gambit (xxx), on 7 at 3:30. Amusing 1966 spy spoof about a daring robbery caper in Hong Kong starring Shirley MacLaine and Michael Caine.

Quarantined (xx), on 12 at 7. A 1970 pilot for a TV series about a medical family. John Dehner is the head of a family of doctors (three sons and a psychiatrist daughter-in-law) who run a modern clinic atop a hill near the sea.

Singapore (xx), on 13 at 7. Ered MacMurray and Ava Gardner star in this 1947 adventure that has the Second World War interrupting the wedding plans of a young couple.

Baffled (xx), on 5 at 8. A 1972 made-for-TV suspense thriller about a race driver confused by visions of people in some kind of trouble. A competent cast includes Leonard Nimoy, Susan Hampshire and Vera Miles.

A Cold Night's Death (xx), on 4 at 9:30. Robert Culp and Eli Wallach star in this self-thriller about two scientists trapped in a snowbound research station.

Birds of Prey (xx), on 7 at 9:30. A 1973 chase drama that has David Janssen playing a helicopter-borne traffic reporter drawn into an aerial duel with a gang of bank robbers.

The Challengers (xx), on 13 at 11. Race-car drivers risking death in pursuit of the world championship forms the plot for this 1970 drama that stars Darrin McGavin and Anne Baxter.

The House That Screamed (xx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. An international cast stars in this 1970 Spanish-made thriller that has murder stalking the halls of a French girls' boarding school.

The Castle (xxx), on 2 at 11:50. A 1968 German-made adaptation of Franz Kafka's allegorical classic about a life-or-death battle against a suffocating bureaucracy.

French Writer
Profiled on CBC Radio

The famous French writer, Colette, was born in a Burgundy village in 1873 and died in 1954, aged 81; 1973 is the centenary of her birth. To mark this important literary anniversary, CBC Tuesday Night presents a profile of Colette on January 30 at 8:30 p.m. EST (February 8 at 8 p.m. on CBC-FM's Encore).

Colette was the creator of such literary heroines as Claudine, Gigi, and Mitsou. Her own life story rivalled those of her fictional characters; she had as much talent for scandal as she did for writing. At 20 she married a man 14 years older than herself. After their divorce, she began a new career as a dancer and mime. In the years to follow she had two more husbands, and produced a daughter; she also had a lesbian relationship with the daughter of a duke. She married her third husband, Maurice Goudek, when she was 62, he 40.

On the program, freelance broadcaster Marjory White-law talks to people intimately connected with the late writer, including Goudek who still lives in Paris. Also heard is Margaret Crosland, one of her English translators, whose authoritative biography of Colette will soon be published by Peter Owen of London.

Another contributor is the Bibliotheque Nationale in Paris which has prepared an exhibition, to celebrate Colette's centenary.

The CBC Tuesday Night program of January 30 discusses Colette as a writer, her place in French life, her instinctive rather than intellectual perceptions, her highly individualistic views, the deeply sensuous quality of her response to existence as well as to her writing. Though Colette was an early freedom fighter for the right of women to live as they choose, it is not likely she would have joined a women's lib organization. She was too much of an individual for that.

Colette (1873-1954)

Act of Violence (xx), on 4 at 9:30. Van Heflin stars in this 1948 chase melodrama.

Convicted (xx), on 13 at noon. A 1950 prison drama starring Glenn Ford.

Cyborg 2087 (x), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. Cyborg's (half-human, half-machine) revolt in the year 2087 in this sci-fi adventure.

I Walk Alone (xx), on 5 at 3:30. After 14 years in prison, an ex-mobster (played by Burt Lancaster) sets out to get even with the man who sent him up.

Ghost and Mr. Chicken (x), on 7 at 3:30. A silly Don Knotts comedy.

The Mountain Road (xx), on 13 at 7. Drab war drama starring James Stewart.

Canyon Passage (xx), on 13 at 11. Routine western adventure drama starring Dana Andrews.

The Anniversary (xx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. Bette Davis plays the monster mother of all time in this English-made 1963 horror drama, about a woman who controls vast wealth—and her three grown sons.

Night Song (xx), on 2 at 11:30. A long dated (1947) drama about a socialite who falls for a blind piano player starring Dana Andrews, Merle Oberon and Ethel Barrymore.

Jubal (xxx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. Superior 1956 western with Glenn Ford playing a drifter named Jubal Troop who is given a job by a rancher (played by Ernest Borgnine) and immediately starts off a chain reaction of jealousy, hate and violence. Rod Steiger's portrayal of a sadistic coward named Pinky is outstanding.

The Mask of Dion (xx), on 13 at 12:30. A 1946 melodrama that has a jealous magician setting a diabolical death-trap for his wife.

SENIOR CITIZENS TOO BUSY FOR TV

OTTAWA — The CBC has been experimenting with a special television program for senior citizens, but it has not yet caught enough public attention, the CBC told the Canadian Radio-Television Commission recently.

Ron Fraser, vice-president for corporate affairs, told the CRTC hearing the program is being broadcast in Toronto at 2:30 p.m., and suggested this might not be the right time of day.

Walter Turnbull, former deputy postmaster-general, now 76, said it was certainly the wrong time of day. Retired people are too busy to sit at home watching TV in the afternoons.

Mr. Turnbull, who says he still skates and dances, appeared before the commission with the Ottawa Senior Citizens' Council which complained that the CBC ignores or belittles older people in its programming. It therefore brought its complaint before the CRTC.

Mr. Fraser said that in general, much of the CBC's regular programs would be of interest of older viewers. The experimental program, New Directions, was an attempt to reach the older audience specifically.

So far, it had an audience of an estimated 7,500 out of perhaps 250,000 retired people in the Toronto area.

BIT PARTS: Former footballer Fred Williamson will star in To Kill a Dragon, at Universal... Rod Taylor will tour extensively in January to exploit his new movie, The Train Robbers... Nancy Sinatra will make a guest appearance on the new Bobby Darin television show.

JOHN AND JANET FOSTER (above) explore The Other Newfoundland, the third of five specials in the series, To the Wild Country on Sunday, January 28 at 7 p.m. on Channel 2 and 6. This beautiful color film discovers the teeming wildlife and spectacular scenery to be found in areas rarely visited by tourists. One of the many fjords carved into the Long Range Mountains of the west coast is Western Brook Pond (lower photo) in Gros Morne National Park.

To the Wild Country

Moors and mountains reminiscent of Scotland, fjords reminiscent of Norway — panoramas of The Other Newfoundland are explored by John and Janet Foster in the third CBC-TV special in the series To the Wild Country, for telecast Sunday, January 28, at 7 p.m. Host-narrator is Lorne Greene.

In their journeys by boat, car and plane last June, the Fosters discovered the teeming wildlife of The Other Newfoundland, in areas seldom visited by man: the sea birds (murres, puffins, gannets, razor-billed auks, and kittiwakes); and land birds (spotted sandpipers, willow ptarmigans, fox sparrows, white-throated sparrows, and ospreys); the mammals (moose, woodland caribou, Arctic hare, and pine martens); and a variety of exotic flora that bloom on the wind-swept tundra.

Janet Foster describes their foray to Brunette Island (off the south coast) in search of Arctic hare: "We were flown in, and except for the people of the Newfoundland Wildlife Service, were the only ones there. We intended to spend a day and a night, but were fog-bound, and stayed three days."

They lived in a tent, and despite the balmy days of June "it got quite chilly at night." After three days, the Fosters were taken off the island by a fishing vessel. "We landed at Fortune, a little village, and drove all night back to St. John's, arriving at 11 a.m.," Janet recalls. "After two hours' sleep, we took off in a Hercules plane, looking for icebergs. The U.S. Coast Guard operates this iceberg air patrol, on behalf of 14 different nations using the Atlantic shipping lanes — this arrangement was a result of the sinking of the Titanic."

From the air, the Fosters saw fields of ice, drifting from the Arctic to the south, melting death off the rocky shores of Newfoundland.

The close-ups of the awe-inspiring berg provide the one-hour color film special with its most spectacular footage. Janet reports, "The walls were 150 feet high. Birds, living along its edges, circled above. The sides of the iceberg were beautiful, gleaming like sculptured porcelain."

The Fosters' three-week exploration of The Other Newfoundland took them to the wilds of Gros Morne National Park, with its teeming sea bird colonies, long sandy beaches, rocky tidal pools, and flowering tundra and bogs.

Among the immense, brooding fjords that carve their way into the Long Range Mountains (on the west coast), one of the most breathtaking is the fjord at Western Brook Pond, its walls rising 2,000 feet out of the sea. On the Humber River, Atlantic salmon leap doggedly upstream, against the raging currents and churning rapids. As John and Janet Foster approach rocky shorelines, clouds of birds take to the air over their heads. As they walk across tundra, they have to step carefully to avoid crushing the eggs of sea birds in their grounded nests.

Actor Donates Ranch

SANTA SUSANA, Calif. — Actor James Arness, star of the Gunsmoke television series, has donated a 950-acre ranch north of Los Angeles to the Brandeis Camp Institute.

The ranch, with houses, corals, barns and outbuildings, is next to 2,250 acres of institute land in the Simi Valley. Arness' property was said to be worth $2 million.

"It was a very ecumenical act of philanthropy by Mr. Arness, who is not himself Jewish," Dr. Max Bay, president of the Jewish youth organization institute, said Wednesday.

A spokesman for Arness said the actor raised crops, cattle and horses on the ranch since 1960.

LIKE A-BLAST AFTERMATH, a cloud of dust, smoke and volcanic ash hangs over the island of Heimaey in Iceland's Westman Islands. The smoke spiral is directly over the town of Vestmannaeyjar in the centre of the island, site of upheavals from the Helgafjell volcano in the past four days after almost 1,000 years of inactivity. Icelandic officials feel that perhaps the only way to cap the volcano now is to bomb directly into the crater and seal the fissures now spewing lava on the island.

Gunman Killed In Hijack Bid

CALVI, Corsica (Reuters)

A heavily-armed man was shot to death today after seizing five hostages in an abortive hijack attempt at Calvi airport.

The gunman said to have been a French Foreign Legionnaire burst into the airport lounge armed with a sub-machine-gun, an automatic pistol and a sack filled with fragmentation grenades and cartridges, police said.

He then grabbed five persons in the lounge and held them at gunpoint. He said he intended to hijack a plane of the international French airline France Inter, which was due to land in Calvi in the afternoon.

If he failed, he said, he would commit suicide, eyewitnesses said.

One of the hostages fainting and the gunman released her.

Police surrounded the building and tried to negotiate with the gunman. When their efforts failed a Legion warrant officer entered the lounge and tried to wrestle the sub-machine-gun away from the man, who in turn threw a grenade which exploded in an adjoining room but caused no injuries.

The warrant officer then pulled out his pistol and killed the man with three bullets in the head, police said.

Police believed the man wanted to hijack the plane to Greece.

OTTAWA — In spite of intensified government and private campaigns against smoking cigarette consumption is up again by almost five per cent, according to industry statistics for 1972.

Cigarette production by the Big Four manufacturers represented by the Canadian Tobacco Manufacturers' Council jumped from 2,332 per capita in 1971 to 2,421 cigarettes per Canadian in 1972.

That works out to every man and child smoking seven cigarettes a day, every day, all year.

And federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde says he is concerned about this latest jump in cigarette consumption.

As a result, he has ordered his officials to provide him with a breakdown by age groups of the numbers of cigarette users.

Lalonde said "cutting cigarette advertisements off of radio and television doesn't seem to have reduced consumption." "Do we cut cigarette ads out of newspapers too? And then do we make cigarettes available only by prescription?" he added, seemingly half in jest.

He indicated during a recent interview that he is particularly concerned that young people may be starting on or returning to the "evil weed" at a faster pace than the rest of the population.

Even if cigarette consumption among young people matched the overall average, that could still mean that the increase in smoking is outpacing the growth in population in Canada, now about 1.5 per cent.

Lalonde has also asked his officials to keep a close watch on the voluntary actions of cigarette manufacturers, if restricting advertising will help the problem.

Salmon Rivers Get Funds From Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said the government is allocating extra money this year for the clearing of salmon spawning streams in B.C.

He made the statement in the House in answer to a question from Tom Barrett (NDP—Comox-Alberni) who asked when Ottawa will set aside money and assign staff to "catch up with the 'long-standing backlog' of neglected salmon spawning streams in the province.

RED FACES OVER FLAG

LONDON (AP) — Red-faced officials of the British Aircraft Corp. are trying to find out who was to blame for their supersonic Concorde flying into a Portuguese colony displaying the flag of an anti-Portuguese guerrilla movement.

A spokesman for BAC, which is building the 1,500-mile-an-hour jet with Aerospatiale of France, said: "The crew honestly thought they were flying the flag of Angola, the Portuguese province in West Africa."

The few remaining islanders were told by radio to stay indoors because of poisonous sulphur gas fumes which give a suffocating feeling and cause coughing.

Police, firemen and civil defence workers have been issued gas masks.

The government, meeting in almost continuous emergency sessions since the volcano erupted Tuesday morning, has turned down requests from the 5,500 evacuated islanders to be allowed to go back and save their personal belongings.

Bulldozers are at work in the threatened eastern part of the town, building walls from hardened lava to try to stem the glowing flow from more than 15 craters spouting fire, gas and ashes.

Outwardly the ghost town remains intact except for a dozen wooden houses gutted by fire. Most of the houses are concrete structures.

Mop-Up Crews Converge On Alert Bay Spill Site

An emergency meeting of all levels of government was held at Alert Bay this afternoon while ships were being rushed to the scene of the biggest oil spill on the British Columbia coast.

As the meeting was under way James Caird, master of the freighter Irish Stardust which has speared an estimated 100,000 gallons of crude bunker oil since she hit rocks in Johnstone Strait early Thursday, was due to appear in Victoria provincial court.

The charge is failing to report by radio to a pollution officer the discharge of oil or an oily mixture in Canadian waters.

A ministry of transport official in Vancouver said the 20,000-ton freighter hit rocks in the area of Harrington Island, across from Alert Bay just after midnight.

"The incident wasn't reported to us until 8:45 a.m.," he said.

Alert Bay, a village on Cormorant Island, facing northern Vancouver Island, will be the centre for the massive mop-up needed but oil has been scattered all along the route the Irish Star took on her way to Victoria.

She arrived here Thursday evening. Today she was in the Esquimalt Graving Dock, waiting for repairs, the whole of her port side girdled with an oil boom.

A diver, interviewed after he had gone down to examine her No. 4 hold where most of the leakage is expected to have started, said she could be punctured in several places.

A preliminary closed-hearing, ordered by the ministry of transport, began as soon as the Irish Stardust arrived here Thursday evening.

Ho Chi Minh Trail Bombs May Continue—U.S.

Canada Has Plans In Case ...

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The U.S. defence department today left open the possibility that bombing of the Ho Chi Minh trail and other Communist-held military targets in Laos and Cambodia will continue after the Vietnam ceasefire goes into effect Saturday.

Department spokesman Jerry Freidheim ducked direct comment on the issue when quizzed by newsmen today, only saying that the agreement only covered fighting in North and South Vietnam, not other Southeast Asian nations.

In Paris, Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh, foreign minister of the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government, said President Nixon violated the spirit of the ceasefire agreement when he maintained the Saigon regime was the only legal South Vietnamese government.

At a news conference she insisted its clauses recognize the legitimacy of the PRG as well.

She hammered away time and again during the hour-long conference on the theme that the agreement recognized two rival administrations, two armies and two zones of control.

The spirit of Mr. Nixon's statement concerning the Saigon administration is not in conformity with the peace agreement," she said.

"We should like to believe that the American government has learned the lesson of this longest and most difficult war in its history," she added.

and that President Nixon now understands that no force, however brutal, and no manœuvre, however perfidious, can obligate the Vietnamese people to renounce its fundamental rights.

Two Americans and nearly 400 North and South Vietnamese were killed today and Thursday in a storm of attacks across South Vietnam.

OTTAWA — Defence Minister James Richardson said today Canada had several contingency plans for evacuating its peace observers from Vietnam in the event of new hostilities. He did not elaborate.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said he had no indication that any of the parties to the peace agreement would hold Canada to the requirement that observer countries give three months' notice before withdrawing from the supervisory group.

What will Canada's Vietnam observers do if some body shoots at them — something bigger than a pistol — "Dig a hole," an aide added when the question was put to the minister outside the Commons Thursday.

Richardson had just reiterated that the observers will be allowed to carry sidearms for personal safety only, other than that they would be unarmed.

Arrival of an Artist —And Other Thoughts

Being some random items from a man's personal diary:

Item: Is there anything more exciting in life than seeing the fulfillment of a man's dreams and talent? Oh, come now, Scott, no more of these rhetorical questions, eh? Okay, but that's how I felt seeing the one-man show of the one and only Sid Barron, now on view at the Art Gallery and there until Feb. 11.

Sid has been a serious painter all his adult life. His work has been seen in galleries all across the country. But these 20 paintings and collages, this beautiful burst of color and design, and mood, does represent a kind of fruition for Sid who has spent so many years as a commercial artist and drawer of cartoons. A man of 56 — God, you're old, Sid! — a man and artist has reached fulfillment and I can think of nothing more exciting.

On the opening night of the show a young man came up to Barron and said there was one painting that he just had to have. It was priced at $200 and he was broke. But could he pay Sid $20 a month over the next 10 months? That painting is now marked with a star — meaning "sold" — and it wouldn't surprise me if Sid sees it as the high point of his career.

Item: Mighty pleased to learn today that some 80 Victorians have joined the Association for Public Broadcasting in British Columbia, the group that's out to save television from the hot hand of the hucksters. Hefschel Hardin, its president, writes me: "One of the most heartening things about the Victoria response was the enthusiasm and commitment."

There'll be a meeting of all Vancouver Island members on Thursday, Feb. 1, at 8 p.m. in the Victoria Art Gallery. This could be the start of something big.

Item: Mixed emotions all this week, reading of the impasse in the strike of the school employees, and I suppose most men of my vintage who went to small schools have an evergreen memory of a School Caretaker that will prejudice their views in this local trouble.

I vividly remember, myself, the janitor of the small Hollyburn School in West Vancouver who taught me how to make a whistle from an alder branch and made a kite for me that flew six days and nights from the end of Dundarave pier and who taught me more about right and wrong than any teacher I was ever to have.

An anonymous reader sends me the clipping of a column by one Neil Haight in the Bracebridge (Ont.) Herald-Gazette that's very timely. Haight was reminiscing about a caretaker named Mr. Bull and had this to say:

"As a student I can now think of the many ways he helped us. He was more than a caretaker. He was a friend, one who sympathized, a dispenser of iodine and bandages, as much a part of the school as the teachers. He always found time to be available at recess to watch over the little ones — to tie a shoe lace, to put some iodine on a cut, to bandage a bruised knee, to fix a skipping rope, to keep track of the school softball and rugby ball as they were hard to come by in those days. If the softball was ripped it was Mr. Bull who sewed it up ready for the next game. He seemed always to be there when he was needed most."

"No, you won't find Mr. Bull's name on any school plaques nor will you find his picture on any school wall and his name will never be mentioned at any of the school functions. Such are the ways of man."

I suppose you'll seldom find such a man in today's larger schools, but there's a tradition there that doesn't die easily and perhaps that explains why I'm entirely on that side in this particular dispute.

Item: To the Centennial Pool off Colwood way this afternoon for a therapeutic swim and it was like being shot from a cannon back into my youth. The shrill, echoing, reverberating cries of the small fry, the warm, wet-towel, chlorine aroma, the general impression that everyone was an inch away from drowning, the inscrutable, unalarmed young lifeguard — nothing had changed.

A pretty sight was at one end of the pool where perhaps a dozen stoutish young matrons were involved in some slimming exercises, often down on their fine, fulsome buttocks, bending and swaying, and I like to think — though my wife dismissed it as a foolish fancy — that all this incredible effort, in every case, was for some grateful man.

A pretty sight too, was an older, grey-haired instructor, flat-bellied, puckered by constant immersion, who was giving some tiny tots their first lessons in swimming, a man of such patience and understanding that I was moved to tell him, later, that it had impressed me very much.

"It would impress you more," said he, with a sigh, "if you knew how many of these tiny tots are monsters from outer space."

I then dazzled my wife by doing two laps of the pool in a flat 40 seconds — the short way, across the kiddies' end.

'Landmark Decision' Awaited by Ostler

A 21-year-old man, who pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana, today was remanded to Feb. 16 to await what Judge William Ostler termed "a landmark decision" on granting discharges.

Defence counsel for Ian Bailey MacLean had asked Ostler for a conditional discharge for his client, a first offender.

Ostler said there had been "substantial judicial disagreement" across Canada on the matter of discharges and for that reason suggested a remand, pending the outcome of a B.C. Court of Appeals ruling on the matter Feb. 9.

"What happens in that case (the Appeal Court ruling) will then be binding on the whole province," said the judge.

Some downtown merchants at Government and View have mixed feelings about who their real customers are — cars or people.

Interviews with shopkeepers about a formal proposal to take traffic off Government and View streets in the downtown area and create a tree-lined mall drew varied reactions.

Inge Heimlich, manager of The Quest crafts shop, said she had seen such malls in Switzerland and in downtown Calgary and she liked them and thought they would improve business.

But Derek Bateman, operator of a sporting goods shop, said he thought city council must be mad to consider such a plan.

"I've seen it in action and it worked," Mrs. Heimlich said. "Tourists want to nip in and out quickly, we should make Wharf and Government one-way streets, that would solve the traffic problem," Bateman said.

Lavone Landie, co-manager of a health food shop and food bar, said she thought it would be nice to have tables on the sidewalk and to get rid of the noisy buses and trucks, but she had doubts about winter business.

"It would certainly be interesting to try it, though," she said. "I must admit I hadn't really thought about it, although I read about the proposal in the paper."

Alistair Macduff, operator of an art gallery, was outraged by the proposal. He said a traffic-free mall downtown would drive business away.

"Business seems to go out to the suburban shopping centres," he said. "What we need, I admit, but not if it didn't bring the people in," Macduff said.

A young shop assistant sweeping the doorway at Roy Imports said she thought a tree-lined mall would be "fantastic."

At Betty's Cafe the manageress wasn't sure about the whole idea, she said cars sometimes pulled up outside bringing customers in for a meal. She said the crowds on the sidewalks in summer seemed to need more room to move in.

At Souvenirs And Gifts Galore the operator said she didn't own the store so she didn't want to comment.

The owner of the Irish Linen shop, who wouldn't give his name, said it would be nice to get rid of the trucks (heavy lumber haulers head to Ogden Point docks down Government), but basically he wanted to see detailed plans before he came to a decision.

He admitted such mall schemes might have worked in other towns, other countries — "but what goes in one place doesn't necessarily go in another."

Nora Higgins, co-manager of The Hand Loom, said a mall would be attractive, if tastefully done.

"As long as they give us proper access for deliveries and so on, I think it's a very good idea," she commented.

"It'll relieve pollution, the awful fumes the cars make; it'll get rid of the dreadful noise of the buses. I'm generally in favor of the idea."

Brian Small, secretary of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, who has an office overlooking Government, said there was "no way" the scheme would catch on.

He said there would be traffic problems if Government were closed before outer by-pass roads had been completed — but James Bay residents, he said, would "never allow them to cut up Beacon Hill Park."

"It'll be Broad and View closed off, not Government," he predicted, shouting over the roar of passing trucks and cars as he stood on the sidewalk.

A plan submitted to city council by Ald. Sam Bawlf, due to be discussed in committee Tuesday, would close Government from Humboldt to Yates, and View from Government to beyond Douglas.

Wharf would be one way going south, and Blanshard street clear of steep slopes.

Adjoining property owners would be asked to share in costs through a referendum.

Lang Passing The Buck: Chief

Victoria Police Chief J. F. Gregory said today Justice Minister Otto Lang is passing the buck in accusing the police of inadequately enforcing the recent Bail Reform Act.

"I think that the police, as usual, are being blamed for the mistakes of the legislators," said Gregory.

Lang said he had recently written provincial attorneys-general and told them the law's ability to keep people in custody was not being adequately used.

"We must improve the way police operate within the law," said Lang.

Gregory said, "We are operating within the law. If we're not operating according to public demand then the law is wrong."

The Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police have made submissions to the government to bolster certain inadequacies in the Bail Reform Act — and we have been ignored."

The government accepted some submissions "but didn't accept others," he added. Saanich Police Chief Robert Peterson agrees with Gregory.

"I think really, we're doing all that can be done under the act. We're just following it the way it's written," he said. Lawyer Michael Hutchison said the new bail reform provisions, which became effective Jan. 1, 1972, have not been abused but have been misinterpreted.

"This is has been a point of some consideration in a number of court cases," said Hutchison.

The "major change" in the act is that the onus has been shifted from the defence to the prosecutor to justify the release of the accused, he said.

"We're going to give the benefit of the doubt to a person charged with a criminal offence, which is consistent with our system of the accused being innocent until proven guilty," he said.

Judge Regrets Past Leniency

Two men were today sentenced in Victoria provincial court to a total of four years for armed robbery, Judge William Ostler admitting that previous leniency with one of the accused "had blown up in his face."

John Jeffrey Hannay, 25, and James Brian McWilliams, 18, both of no fixed address, pleaded guilty Wednesday to robbing a gas station attendant at knife-point Jan. 13.

In McWilliams' case, the judge said, a special probation officer had been found and a suspended sentence ordered for the man on another offence "a scant few days" before the robbery took place.

Ostler said that it "seemed impossible to deter McWilliams by kindness, and admitted that any experiment in leniency 'had blown up in my face.'"

Ostler sentenced Hannay, self-confessed ringleader in the robbery, to three years. McWilliams was given 18 months definite, 18 months indeterminate on the robbery charge, one year on another Nov. 20 break-in charge and four months for breach of probation, all sentences to run concurrently.

Conditions In Schools 'Depressing'

By LINDA HUGHES

With negotiation talks resuming Saturday, teachers and principals said today "depressing" is the only word to describe conditions in struck Victoria schools.

In a survey of schools, spokesmen said the psychological effect of dirty conditions was the major problem.

"It's grimy and depressing," one principal said, "the atmosphere just isn't right."

"We spend so much time trying to get children to take a pride in their school and their own cleanliness," another said, "but it's hard to keep doing this when it's obvious to them no one else cares."

All the principals said they were pleased with how well children were trying to keep schools clean themselves.

"The kids keep asking when the custodians will be back," one principal said, "they don't like sitting in dirty classrooms."

Most schools said there has been no direct effect on instruction except that children can not sit in seminar groups on the floor, most sport activities have been cancelled and other "more enriching extra activities" have been curtailed.

"The washrooms are getting a little high," one teacher said.

Another school said six windows had been broken since the strike by maintenance workers began two weeks ago.

"We weren't even supposed to clean up the broken glass,"

the principal said. "Of course we had to sweep it out of the classrooms, but we can't fix the windows."

"Our school has only been swept once," another said. "The filth is so thick I don't know how long it will take to clean it all up again."

Most principals commended the cleanup work done by school board supervisory personnel, but stressed the impossibility of doing a proper job in all 54 schools in the district.

"I don't know how long morale can hold up in these dirty conditions," one principal said.

Meanwhile, in schools without heat which are open only for one or two hours a day, many parents are becoming more vocal in their protests.

"My children sit in the classroom with heavy coats and hats on," one Margaret

Jenkins parent said. "They just can't learn that way."

Many mothers say their children find it difficult to learn at home and parents aren't always able to help them.

"Parents are being penalized as well," one mother said. "I'm a student and I have to miss classes and give up my studying time to supervise my children."

"A lot of working mothers have to pay for babysitters or make involved arrangements with neighbors — it's a financial burden."

Parents say children generally look forward to getting back to a normal school routine — the younger ones because they find the upheaval upsetting and the older ones because they're afraid of getting too far behind in their work.

LANSDOWNE TO RE-OPEN

Lansdowne campus of Camosun College will re-open Monday on regular schedules, despite the strike by school board maintenance workers.

Since the strike began two weeks ago, all Camosun classes have been held on their Interurban campus, which is not staffed by the striking CUPE local.

Students and teachers have indicated a strong desire to return to the Lansdowne campus despite cold classrooms, according to principal Grant Fisher, in order that students who have been unable to attend the other campus can resume their normal studies.

All day and evening upgrading, career and academic programs, except basic training for skill development, will resume normal operation at Lansdowne on Monday.

Community service courses scheduled for both campuses will also be operating normally starting Monday.

With the withdrawal of academic courses from Interurban, trades and industrial training students will return to regular schedules at Interurban and Quadra campuses.

Other community service courses, normally held in schools throughout the district, will still be cancelled until the strike ends. Classes will recommence the Monday following the settlement of the strike and compensating sessions will be offered.

VGH Appoints Administrator

The new executive director of Victoria General Hospital is James S. Fair, 39, a pharmacist who is now director of diagnostic services at Vancouver General Hospital.

The hospital board approved hiring him Thursday night on the recommendation of its personnel committee.

There was no debate. Fair, who will take up the chief administrative post at the hospital March 16, replaces Dr. E. G. Q. Van Tilberg, who resigned last July citing "irreconcilable differences" with the board.

Acting chairman Tom Shorthouse declined today to say what Fair's salary will be but earlier indications were the job carried a salary in the $25,000 range.

89th YEAR, No. 192

VICTORIA, B.C., FRIDAY, JANUARY 26, 1973

10 CENTS DAILY, 20 CENTS SATURDAY

LIKE A-BLAST AFTERMATH, a cloud of dust, smoke, and volcanic ash hangs over the island of Heimaey in Iceland's Westman Islands. The smoke spiral is directly over the town of Vestmannaeyjar in the centre of the island, site of upheavals from the Helgafjell volcano in the past four days after almost 1,000 years of inactivity. Icelandic officials feel that perhaps the only way to cap the volcano now is to bomb directly into the crater and seal the fissures now spewing lava on the island.

B.C. Cement Firm Monopoly Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eight companies have been accused of illegally decreasing and preventing competition in the sale and supply of cement and ready-mix concrete in British Columbia.

The charges, laid under the federal Combines Investigation Act, cover a 14-year period between Jan. 1, 1958, and Dec. 31, 1971. They were sworn out by Staff Sergeant Gerald Young of the RCMP and were due for return in provincial court here today.

Accused on two counts under the act are Ocean Construction Supplies Ltd., Lafarge Canada Ltd., Canada

Cement Lafarge Ltd., Deeks Concrete Ltd., Metro Concrete Ltd., and British Columbia Cement Co. Ltd.

Also named in the charges involving the seven companies, but not charged, are Inland Cement Industries Ltd., and the Construction Labor Relations Association.

Ocean Construction is also charged with a third count jointly with Butler Brothers Supplies Ltd.

The association acts as spokesman for more than 600 contractors in B.C.

The charges against the seven firms facing two charges state: "... Did unlawfully conspire, combine, agree or arrange together and with one another and with Inland Cement Industries Limited and the Construction Labor Relations Association and the members thereof, unduly to prevent or lessen competition in the production, manufacture, purchase, sale, transportation or supply in the province of British Columbia of an article or commodity which may be the subject of trade or commerce, to wit cement, and did thereby commit an indictable offence contrary to the provisions of the Combines Investigation Act."

The second charge duplicates the wording above except that where cement is the commodity named in the first charge, ready-mix concrete is the commodity listed in the second.

The charge against Ocean Construction and Butler Brothers, involves dates between Jan. 1, 1960, and Dec. 31, 1971, and reads:

"... Did unlawfully conspire, combine, agree or arrange together and with one another and with Columbia Ready Mix Ltd., and with Trio Ready-Mix Ltd., and Trio Ready-Mix (1971) Ltd. unduly to prevent or lessen competition in the production, manufacture, purchase, sale, transportation or supply on Vancouver Island in the province of B.C. of an article or commodity which may be the subject of trade or commerce, to wit ready-mix concrete, and did thereby commit an indictable offence contrary to the provisions of the Combines Investigation Act."

Salmon Rivers Get Funds From Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said the government is allocating extra money this year for the clearing of salmon spawning streams in B.C.

He made the statement in the House in answer to a question from Tom Barnett (NDP — Comox-Alberni) who asked when Ottawa will set aside money and assign staff to catch up with the "long-standing backlog" of neglected salmon spawning streams in the province.

Alberni Walkout

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — About 350 employees of the Sproat Lake division of MacMillan Bloedel walked off the job today, shutting down the division. The dispute is over application of seniority to job categories.

Mop-Up Crews Converge On Alert Bay Spill Site

An emergency meeting of all levels of government was held at Alert Bay this afternoon while ships were being rushed to the scene of the biggest oil spill on the British Columbia coast.

As the meeting was under way James Caird, master of the freighter Irish Stardust which has speeded an estimated 100,000 gallons of crude bunker oil since she hit rocks in Johnstone Strait early Thursday, was due to appear in Victoria provincial court.

The charge is failing to report by radio to a pollution officer the discharge of oil or an oily mixture in Canadian waters.

A ministry of transport official in Vancouver said the 20,000-ton freighter hit rocks in the area of Harrington Island just after midnight.

"The incident wasn't reported to us until 8:45 a.m.," he said.

Alert Bay, a village on Cormorant Island, facing northern Vancouver Island, will be the centre for the massive mop-up needed but oil has been scattered all along the route the Irish Stardust took on her way to Victoria.

She arrived here Thursday evening. Today she was in the Esquimalt Graving Dock, waiting for repairs, the whole of her port side girdled with an oil boom.

A diver, interviewed after he had gone down to examine her No. 4 hold where most of the leakage is expected to have started, said she could be punctured in several places.

A preliminary closed hearing, ordered by the ministry of transport, began as soon as the Irish Stardust arrived here Thursday evening.

Gunman Killed In Hijack Bid

CALVI, Corsica (Reuter) — A heavily-armed man was shot to death today after seizing five hostages in an abortive hijack attempt at Calvi airport.

The gunman, said to have been a French Foreign Legionnaire, burst into the airport lounge armed with a sub-machine-gun, an automatic pistol and a sack filled with fragmentation grenades and cartridges, police said.

He then grabbed five persons in the lounge and held them at gunpoint. He said he intended to hijack a plane of the international French airline France Inter, which was due to land in Calvi in the afternoon.

If he failed, he said, he would commit suicide, eyewitnesses said.

One of the hostages fainting and the gunman released her. Police surrounded the building and tried to negotiate with the gunman. When their efforts failed a Legion warrant officer entered the lounge and tried to wrestle the sub-machine-gun away from the man who in turn threw a grenade which exploded in an adjoining room but caused no injuries.

The warrant officer then pulled out his pistol and killed the man with three bullets in the head, police said.

Police believed the man wanted to hijack the plane to Greece.

VESTMANNAEYJAR, Iceland (UPI) — The ground burst open in several new places around the erupting Helgafjell volcano today, spewing out new flows of lava.

Officials said even bombing the fiery crater from the air may not be able to save the deserted town.

Rescue officials said the situation has taken a turn for the worse with new eruptions expected at any time, even inside the town — once the prosperous fishing capital of Iceland.

The Icelandic government ordered everyone not directly connected with the rescue work to get off Heimaey Island.

The government has studied plans to bomb the volcano from the air in an attempt to divert at least part of the deadly lava flow and planes and bombs are standing by at the U.S. base near Reykjavik.

The few remaining islanders were told by radio to stay indoors because of poisonous sulphur gas fumes which give a suffocating feeling and cause coughing.

Police, firemen and civil defence workers have been issued gas masks.

The government, meeting in almost continuous emergency sessions since the volcano erupted Tuesday morning, has turned down requests from the 5,500 evacuated islanders to be allowed to go back and save their personal belongings.

Bulldozers are at work in the threatened eastern part of the town, building walls from hardened lava to try to stem the glowing flow from more than 13 craters spouting fire, gas and ashes.

Ashes and lava lie knee-deep in the streets of Vestmannaeyjar and rescue workers can use only jeeps for transportation.

Outwardly the ghost town remains intact except for a dozen wooden houses gutted by fire. Most of the houses are concrete structures.

SMOKES BY PRESCRIPTION?

By JEFF CARRUTHERS

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — In spite of intensified government and private campaigns against smoking, cigarette consumption is up again by almost five per cent, according to industry statistics for 1972.

Cigarette production by the Big Four manufacturers represented by the Canadian Tobacco Manufacturers' Council jumped from 2,352 per capita in 1971 to 2,421 cigarettes per Canadian in 1972.

That works out to every man and child smoking seven cigarettes a day, every day, all year.

And federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde says he is concerned about this latest jump in cigarette consumption.

As a result, he has ordered his officials to provide him with a breakdown by age groups of the numbers of cigarette users.

Lalonde said "cutting cigarette advertisements off of radio and television doesn't seem to have reduced consumption." Do we cut cigarette ads out of newspapers too? And then do we make cigarettes available only by prescription?" he added, seemingly half in jest.

He indicated during a recent interview that he is particularly concerned that young people may be starting on or returning to the "evil weed" at a faster pace than the rest of the population.

Even if cigarette consumption among young people matched the overall average, that could still mean that the increase in smoking is outpacing the growth in population in Canada, now about 1.5 per cent.

Lalonde has also asked his officials to keep a close watch on the voluntary actions of cigarette manufacturers, if restricting advertising will help the problem.

after the Vietnam ceasefire goes into effect Saturday.

Department spokesman Jerry Freidheim ducked direct comment on the issue "when quizzed by newsmen today," only saying that the agreement only covered fighting in North and South Vietnam, not other Southeast Asian nations.

In Paris, Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh, foreign minister of the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government, said President Nixon violated the "spirit" of the ceasefire agreement when he maintained the Saigon regime was the only legal South Vietnamese government.

"At a news conference she insisted its clauses recognize the legitimacy of the PRG as well."

She hammered away time and again during the hour-long conference on the theme that the agreement recognized two rival administrations, two armies and two zones of control.

The spirit of Mr. Nixon's statement concerning the Saigon administration is not in conformity with the peace agreement," she said.

"We should like to believe that the American government has learned the lesson of this longest and most difficult war in its history," she added, "and that President Nixon now understands that no force, however brutal, and no manoeuvre, however perfidious, can oblige the Vietnamese people to renounce its fundamental rights."

Two Americans and nearly 100 North and South Vietnamese were killed today and Thursday in a storm of attacks across South Vietnam matched by the heaviest U.S. air strikes in eight months.

"The war's still on," said the commander of a U.S. marine unit wing after the death of one of his young security guards during a rocket attack on the Bien Hoa air

Canada Has Plans In Case ...

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Defence Minister James Richardson said today Canada had several contingency plans for evacuating its peace observers from Vietnam in the event of new hostilities. He did not elaborate.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said he had no indication that any of the parties to the peace agreement would hold Canada to the requirement that observer countries give three months' notice before withdrawing from the supervisory group.

What will Canada's Vietnam observers do if somebody shoots at them with something bigger than a pistol?

"Dig a hole," an aide added when the question was put to the minister outside the Commons Thursday.

Richardson had just reiterated that the observers will be allowed to carry sidearms for personal safety only. Other than that they would be unarmed.
